

Behaviorist Theory of language Acquisition

The behaviorist theory of language acquisition is a psychological theory that suggests that language development can be explained by the principles of behaviorism, which emphasize observable behaviors and environmental factors. This theory was prominent in the early to mid-20th century but has been largely supplanted by more comprehensive theories, such as the nativist and interactionist theories, which take into account both nature (biological factors) and nurture (environmental factors) in language development.

Key ideas and proponents of the behaviorist theory of language acquisition include:

1. B.F. Skinner: Perhaps the most well-known proponent of behaviorism in language acquisition, B.F. Skinner proposed that language is acquired through a process of operant conditioning. According to Skinner, children learn language by imitating the speech of adults and receiving reinforcement (positive or negative) based on the correctness of their utterances. In this view, language is seen as a set of learned habits.
2. Imitation: Behaviorists argued that children learn language by imitating the speech sounds and patterns they hear from adults and caregivers. They believe that children acquire language through a process of mimicry, essentially copying the linguistic behaviors of those around them.
3. Reinforcement: According to behaviorism, children are more likely to repeat linguistic behaviors that are positively reinforced (praised or rewarded) and less likely to repeat behaviors that are negatively reinforced.

Digital Tools in the EFL Classroom. Teaching English as a Foreign Language ,2022-03-04 Bachelor Thesis from the year 2021 in the subject Didactics for the subject English Miscellaneous grade 2 7 University of Dortmund language English abstract This thesis raises the questions why we need digitalization what it can offer and analyses how it can be implemented in the classroom In order to answer this question thoroughly and analyse the software in great detail the first chapter of this thesis lays the theoretical basis for some didactic theories The second chapter provides insights on digitalization in context with multiliteracies and the SAMR model In chapter three the analyzation of the software H5P answers the initially raised questions The COVID 19 pandemic put the spotlight to schools and the school system in general After 18 months of homeschooling and remote education it became obvious that digitalization had not reached the classroom before and very little progress has been achieved until now Even though theoretically digital tools were available it lacked on a working infrastructure in schools in the sense of Wi Fi hardware or well trained teachers Whether it is for the missing devices as a result of the paperwork to apply for the Digitalpakt Schule because of the missing reasons to deal with digitalization in schools as such or because the teachers are not trained enough to use them digitalization in schools did not seem necessary nor wanted and that was no subject to change for a long time In the last few years loads of books training courses for teachers congresses blogs and tweets appeared and at least theoretically digitalization reached schools and classrooms It seems that digitalization in the English language classroom has finally reached teacher education programs at universities and raises a whole new generation of teachers Not only future teachers but also current ones should be keen to know why years ago schools stopped to keep up with digitalization why it needs to be implemented in schools what it offers where its limitations are and how traditional teaching methods can be modified into digital settings

Second Language Learning Theories - The Behaviouristic Approach as the Initial Theory Towards Modern Researches Marie Louis Freyberg, 2010-10 Seminar paper from the year 2006 in the subject English Pedagogy Didactics Literature Studies grade 2 3 University of Kassel 15 entries in the bibliography language English abstract The way of teaching a Second Language is still subject of research and discussion today Current studies on L2 teaching methodologies show the necessity of investigation Long time L2 teaching methodologies were closely related to theories on L2 learning or Second Language Acquisition SLA Those theories became the most popular in World War II and the behaviouristic approach of the 1950 s and 60 s was influential and leading during a long period following That is why this paper concentrates on the behaviouristic approach considering B F Skinner especially As other researchers found this approach insufficient various studies have been initiated They tried to find evidence for opposite theories or they enlarged and or changed behaviourists views The behaviourist approach still has some influence on L2 teaching today However modern investigations made clear that there is a need for distinction between L2 learning theories and teaching methodologies
