Mario Vargas Llosa Raymond L. Williams, 1986 Determinations Neil Larsen, 2001 Determinations is both an uncompromising Marxian engagement with an erstwhile postcolonial theory and a set of new critical readings of a body of postcolonial narratives mainly Latin American Its central propositions are twofold first that the national question however its terms have changed is the still under theorized and unresolved problem that haunts the hyper abstractions and mystifications of postcolonial theory and other ideological flights into globalization second that the important insight into the close cultural link between nation and narration must be carried further so as to disclose their concretely historical fully determinate relationship In essays that first engage the current theoretical parlances of ambivalence hybridity and the subaltern and that go on to flesh out an alternative political narratology through readings of Cortazar Carpentier Garcia Marquez Rulfo and Vargas Llosa Larsen concludes with a critical reassessment of Benedict Anderson s Imagined Communities In place of the cultural essentializing of third worldisms and of the indeterminacies of Bhabhaite or Spivakian textualism Determinations develops a dialectical radically historicized account of the national and the colonial as literary and cultural mediations
