

CHAPTER 12

PRICING DECISIONS AND COST MANAGEMENT

12-1 The three major influences on pricing decisions are

1. Customers
2. Competitors
3. Costs

12-2 Not necessarily. For a one-time-only special order, the relevant costs are only those costs that will change as a result of accepting the order. In this case, full product costs will rarely be relevant. It is more likely that full product costs will be relevant costs for long-run pricing decisions.

12-3 Two examples of pricing decisions with a short-run focus:

1. Pricing for a one-time-only special order with no long-term implications.
2. Adjusting product mix and volume in a competitive market.

12-4 Activity-based costing helps managers in pricing decisions in two ways.

1. It gives managers more accurate product-cost information for making pricing decisions.
2. It helps managers to manage costs during value engineering by identifying the cost impact of eliminating, reducing, or changing various activities.

12-5 Two alternative starting points for long-run pricing decisions are

1. Market-based pricing, an important form of which is target pricing. The market-based approach asks, "Given what our customers want and how our competitors will react to what we do, what price should we charge?"
2. Cost-based pricing which asks, "What does it cost us to make this product and, hence, what price should we charge that will recoup our costs and achieve a target return on investment?"

12-6 A target cost per unit is the estimated long-run cost per unit of a product (or service) that, when sold at the target price, enables the company to achieve the targeted operating income per unit.

12-7 Value engineering is a systematic evaluation of all aspects of the value-chain business functions, with the objective of reducing costs while satisfying customer needs. Value engineering via improvement in product and process designs is a principal technique that companies use to achieve target costs per unit.

12-8 A value-added cost is a cost that customers perceive as adding value, or utility, to a product or service. Examples are costs of materials, direct labor, tools, and machinery. A nonvalue-added cost is a cost that customers do not perceive as adding value, or utility, to a product or service. Examples of nonvalue-added costs are costs of rework, scrap, expediting, and breakdown maintenance.

12-9 No. It is important to distinguish between when costs are locked in and when costs are incurred, because it is difficult to alter or reduce costs that have already been locked in.

The Demo Docs System of instruction replicates the classroom experience by providing more I get it moments outside of class. We've talked to tons of POA instructors and our editors have even taken the accounting course numerous times to figure out the following issue in this course: that is consistent. Students understand or get it right after you do a problem in class but as soon as they leave class with each passing hour their ability to do the problems again and complete their homework diminishes to the point of them either having to come to office hours to get help or they just quit and get behind in the course. On top of this you can end up getting behind in the course as well in order to keep everyone on track. The Demo Docs system helps to recreate the I get it moments outside of class keeping both you and the students on track.
