

Cowboy of the World? Gender Discourse and the Iraq War Debate

Abstract In this article we examine the debate preceding the most recent war in Iraq to show how gendered framing can compromise the quality of debate. Drawing on a sample of national news discourse in the year before the war began, we show that both anti-war and pro-war speakers draw on binary images of gender to construct their cases for or against war. Speakers cast the Bush administration's argument for invasion either as a correct "macho" stance or as inappropriate, out-of-control masculinity. The most prominent gendered image in war debate is that of the cowboy, used to characterize both President Bush and US foreign policy in general. The cowboy is positioned against a diplomatic form of masculinity that is associated with Europe and valued by anti-war speakers, but criticized by pro-war speakers. Articles that draw on gender images show a lower quality of the debate, measured by the extent to which reasons rather than ad hominem arguments are used to support or rebut assertions.

Introduction

In the spring of 2002, the Bush Administration began publicly to discuss the possibility of US military action against Iraq and by spring 2003, the invasion of Iraq had begun. In retrospect, media commentators have asked why they were not more critical of the administration's war plans, and why reservations about going to war expressed by some of the US's closest allies were not taken more seriously. In this paper, we argue that the use of gender images and metaphors in this public debate impoverished the quality of media coverage of the issues. As such, it is an excellent example of the symbolic power of gender to frame issues and constrain alternatives.

Cultural ideologies such as gender form an implicit framework for popular thought and are available to be mobilized in public policy discussions (Stone 1988), especially when gendered images can serve as portrayals of other binary oppositions (us/them, good/evil, offense/

Building Walls, Constructing Identities Marie-Eve Loiselle, 2024-11-19 States are erecting walls at their borders at a pace unmatched in history and the wall between the United States and Mexico stands as an icon among these dividing structures Much has been said about the US Mexico border wall in the last few decades yet American walling projects have a much longer history dating back almost a century Building Walls Constructing Identities offers a rich account of this legal history informed by two episodes of wall building the Act of August 19 1935 and the Secure Fence Act of 2006 These two legislative periods illustrate that today's wall imprints onto the landscape a grammar of racial inequality underpinned by a settler colonial rationality Marie Eve Loiselle argues in favor of an account of the law that considers its material translation into space and identifies discursive processes by which the law and the wall come together to communicate legal knowledge about territory and identity
