Creative Expression Activities for Teens Bonnie Thomas, 2011 Coping with life's stresses is difficult for everybody but can be especially challenging for teenagers who often feel isolated and misunderstood Creative expression through art craft and writing is a natural and effective way of helping young people to explore and communicate personal identity This book is bursting with art and journal activities creative challenges and miniature projects for bedrooms and other personal spaces all of which help teenagers to understand and express who they are and what is important to them These fun ideas can be tailored to suit the individual and require minimal equipment and even less artistic know how so can be enjoyed by all The book concludes with a useful section for counselors and other professionals who work with young people which explains how these activities can be incorporated into treatment goals This imaginative and insightful book is a useful resource for all therapists social workers and counselors who wish to encourage self expression in teenagers The Creative Journal for Teens, Second Edition Lucia Capacchione, 2008-01-11 Helps teenagers express their true feelings and thoughts in the safe nonjudgmental atmosphere of personal journal keeping Creative Journal for Teens Lucia Capacchione, 1992-09-01

Find Yourself R. C. Creative Journal for Teenagers, 2016-08-30 A Journal for Teenagers Exploring Self-portraits with Teens Kent M. Dyer, 2012 Everyone goes through stages of development in which they explore question and form the structures of their identity For pre teens and teenagers creating accepting and understanding identity is an overwhelming and complicated experience that is shaped by social constructions of what is normal In addition to the pressure of outside expectations adolescence is a period of enormous psychological and emotional upheaval thus it can be extremely difficult for adolescents to craft their own personal understandings of identity The goal of my action research project was to see how students would use art making to explore and construct their identities through self portraits I wanted to understand how students would visually represent the tensions between how they see themselves and how they are perceived by others I hoped that this form of artistic inquiry would transform students thinking about identity I investigated the following questions What occurs when students combine art making with expressive writing to explore their own process of identity formation in self portraits What does it look like when students explore the relationship between their self perceived identity and labeled identity How can students use their self portraits to call stereotypes into question and create an identity they are able to accept To gain insight into these questions I invited students from high school to create self portraits My research site was a public high school in a predominately African American south side neighborhood of Chicago For seven weeks we investigated students perceptions of perceived identity and labeled identity Within the high school setting we developed digital narrative self portraits Students represented their identities in a stylized form through the use of colors Because of time constraints the literacy portion of the project in which students were to write a narrative to layer over their portraits was never completed Through my thesis research I learned about students varying perceptions of how they view themselves and how they feel others perceive them I also learned about the complexity and importance of discussing concepts of identity in the classroom I realized that many of the students I worked with have never been asked to think critically about themselves reflect on how stereotypes affect them or create in depth self portraits that move beyond physical representation in order to express a more complex understanding of self and identity Through this project I discovered the importance of discussing difficult concepts of identity with youth and how art can become a medium for such exploration Self Discovery Journal for Teens and Young Adults Gerald Confienza,2018-04-25 In the world of mass communication and information we re living it s getting increasingly harder to connect with ourselves Time spent before reflecting on our innermost desires and goals is being replaced by the scrolling down of our social media feeds Connections and relationships with others are diminished to simple exchanges of text messages Moments of self reflection and self discovery are replaced by reading countless 5 reasons you re a insert adjective here articles Deep in our hearts we re aware of this disconnect we re living but heck we don t know how to stop This journal is a remedy to that problem A very wise person Aristotle once said Knowing yourself is the beginning of all wisdom I couldn t agree more Knowing yourself can give you a better idea of what it is you want in life at this moment the kind of job you d like to have or if you d like one at all perhaps you re more entrepreneurially inclined what kind of trips you want to take what kind of activities you want to surround your life with what kind of friends you d like to have etc Knowing what it is you want is the first step to its acquirement Self Discovery Journal for Teens and Young Adults 200 Questions and Writing Prompts to Find Yourself and the Things You Want to Do in Life is designed to reconnect you with yourself through daily fun and thought provoking journaling prompts All 200 questions found inside this self discovery journal will help you discover things about yourself in different areas of your life Also in every single page you will find a relevant quote filled with wisdom and optimism Welcome to this journal of you
