Chicago Tribune traces the origins of American cooking through profiles of twelve influential women from Hannah Woolley in the mid 1600s to Fannie Farmer, Julia Child, and Alice Waters, whose recipes and ideas changed the way we eat. Anne Willan, multi-award-winning culinary historian, cookbook writer, teacher, and founder of La Varenne Cooking School in Paris, explores the lives and work of women cookbook authors whose essential books have defined cooking over the past three hundred years. Beginning with the first published cookbook by Hannah Woolley in 1661 to the early colonial days to the transformative popular works by Fannie Farmer, Irma Rombauer, Julia Child, Edna Lewis, Marcella Hazan, and up to Alice Waters working today, Willan offers a brief biography of each influential woman, highlighting her key contributions, seminal books, and representative dishes. The book features fifty original recipes as well as updated versions Willan has tested and modernized for the contemporary kitchen. Women in the Kitchen is an engaging narrative that seamlessly moves through the centuries to help readers understand the ways cookbook authors inspire one another that they in part owe their places in history to those who came before them and how they forever change the culinary landscape. This informative and inspiring book is a reminder that the love of delicious food and the care and preparation that goes into it can create a common bond.
