

CHAPTER 2

COST TERMINOLOGY AND COST BEHAVIORS

QUESTIONS

1. The term cost is used to refer to so many different concepts that an adjective must be attached to identify which particular type of cost is being discussed. For example, there are fixed costs, variable costs, period costs, product costs, expired costs, and opportunity costs, to name just a few.
2. A cost object is anything for which management wants to collect or accumulate costs. Direct costs are conveniently and economically traceable to the cost object whereas indirect costs are not. Indirect costs must be allocated in some rational and systematic manner to the cost object.
3. The assumed range of activity that reflects the company's normal operating range is referred to as the relevant range. Outside the relevant range, costs may be curvilinear because of purchase discounts, improved worker skill and productivity, worker crowding, loss in employee efficiency during overtime hours, etc. Although a curvilinear graph is more indicative of reality, it is not as easy to use in planning or controlling costs. Accordingly, accountants choose the range in which these fixed and variable costs are assumed to behave as they are defined (linear) and, as such, represent an approximation of reality.
4. It is not necessary for a causal relationship to exist between the cost predictor and the cost. All that is required is that there is a strong correlation between movement in the predictor and the cost. Alternatively, a cost driver is an activity that actually causes costs to be incurred.

The distinction between cost drivers and predictors is important because it relates to one of the objectives of managers: to control costs. By focusing cost control efforts on cost drivers, managers can exert control over costs. Exerting control over predictors that are not cost drivers will have no cost control effect.

5. A product cost is one that is associated with inventory. In a manufacturing company, product costs would include direct materials, direct labor, and overhead. In a merchandising company, product costs are the costs of purchasing inventory and the related freight-in costs. In a service company, product costs are those costs that are incurred to generate the services provided such as supplies, service labor, and service-related overhead costs.
