Intersections of Ageing and Disability during the COVID-19 Pandemic Bethany Simmonds, Maria

Berghs, 2025-03-14 The sociology of ageing disability and health illness are fields of research which have many crossovers intersections and convergences and these connections have been under researched which reflects the neglect of the sociology of ageing and disability in mainstream sociology more broadly Although the pandemic has illuminated the experiences of older people and people with disabilities disability and age have often been conflated for instance when calculating risk of infection and disease Whilst there are some shared experiences of discrimination and precarity between older people and persons with disabilities there are also important divergences in historical political and theoretical underpinnings in these corpuses of work which need further exploration as does potential for conversations and or connection across distinct fields Although experiences of ageism and disablism are not understood universally they have been intensified by the COVID 19 pandemic The rationing of limited healthcare resources from ventilators to vaccines has been openly debated particularly in relation to their allocation to older people persons with disabilities and or those with chronic health conditions The implementation of restrictions to movement and social interactions in many countries has also had a disproportionate effect on older and disabled groups with many being disproportionately targeted and their freedoms limited to protect them against those who are more likely to spread the virus As groups amongst whom some people tend to already be sequestered from society these practices have had cumulative long term detrimental impacts on their mental physical and social wellbeing and arguably on how both groups are represented in societies Scholarship is responding to issues highlighted by the pandemic in the treatment and representation of older people and persons with disabilities but this tends to focus either on older people or people with disabilities Our goal is instead to move debates forward by seeking contributions that take both disability and ageing into account
