The Personal and the Professional in Aid Work Anne-Meike Fechter, 2016-03-16 This book considers how the personal and the professional dimensions are related and how they matter for aid work. The contributions to this edited volume are based on the assumption that all actors are relevant in development, including national and international aid workers. A key question which the book explores is why the personal so often remains unacknowledged in development studies, even though its salience for aid workers is well documented. One possible reason is an implicit narrative of aid work as altruistic and self-sacrificing which renders it inappropriate to devote much attention to the experiences of development professionals themselves. In order to redress this, this book critically considers the kind of difference they make and aims to understand how they respond to the challenges of their work. The book explores their efficacy as human beings and employees with individual subjectivities, social and cultural beliefs, and practices, and documents how these shape their involvement in development processes. This book was published as a special issue of Third World Quarterly.

Management Behaviours in Higher Education David Dunbar, 2021-02-02 Management Behaviours in Higher Education explores the traits and behaviours of higher education leaders that are associated with staff management. It sets out beneficial management qualities and techniques which can be applied and suggests the need for a behavioural standard for senior managers in universities. The book showcases the importance of creating a supportive motivational climate and culture for greater psychological security in higher education. It proposes the idea of an agreed behavioural framework for those in and being considered for staff management positions to provide an improved motivational climate. Chapters evaluate current business management practice and human resources advice and compare these to research evidence on the management of higher education staff This book will be of great interest for academics researchers and postgraduate students engaged in the study of higher education educational leadership and management studies It will also appeal to those interested in business studies and the suggested parallel role topic of sports coaching or similar
