

Advance Questions for Dr. Ronald M. Sega
Nominee for the Position of Director of Defense Research and Engineering

I. Defense Reforms

More than a decade has passed since the enactment of the Goldwater-Nichols Department of Defense Reorganization Act of 1986 and the Special Operations reforms.

A. Do you support full implementation of these defense reforms?

If confirmed, I will fully support the intent of the reforms and advocate policies that will facilitate accomplishment of joint operations, streamline acquisition management and oversight, and enhance the Department's ability to respond to our 21st century national security challenges.

B. What is your view of the extent to which these defense reforms have been implemented?

I think the Department has done a creditable job in implementing defense reforms. However, without periodic Department policy reviews, these reforms can lose their effectiveness and, if confirmed, I will conduct such a review in my area to ensure we are in keeping with today's environment.

C. What do you consider to be the most important aspects of these defense reforms?

I agree with Mr. Aldridge that the most important aspects of the Goldwater-Nichols Department of Defense Reorganization Act, is strengthening civilian control; improving military advice; placing a clear responsibility on the combatant commanders for the accomplishment of their missions; providing for more efficient use of defense resources; and enhancing the effectiveness of military operations and improving the management and administration of the Department of Defense.

The goals of the Congress in enacting these defense reforms, as reflected in section 3 of the Goldwater-Nichols Department of Defense Reorganization Act, can be summarized as strengthening civilian control; improving military advice; placing clear responsibility on the combatant commanders for the accomplishment of their missions; ensuring the authority of the combatant commanders is commensurate with their responsibility; increasing attention to the formulation of strategy and to contingency planning; providing for more efficient use of defense resources; and enhancing the effectiveness of military operations and improving the management and administration of the Department of Defense.

D. Do you agree with these goals?

Yes, I agree with the goals.

Recently, there have been articles which indicate an interest within the Department of Defense in modifying Goldwater-Nichols in light of the changing environment and
