Thaler, 1993-08-19 Modern financial markets offer the real world's best approximation to the idealized price auction market envisioned in economic theory Nevertheless as the increasingly exquisite and detailed financial data demonstrate financial markets often fail to behave as they should if trading were truly dominated by the fully rational investors that populate financial theories These markets anomalies have spawned a new approach to finance one which as editor Richard Thaler puts it entertains the possibility that some agents in the economy behave less than fully rationally some of the time Advances in Behavioral Finance collects together twenty one recent articles that illustrate the power of this approach These papers demonstrate how specific departures from fully rational decision making by individual market agents can provide explanations of otherwise puzzling market phenomena To take several examples Werner De Bondt and Thaler find an explanation for superior price performance of firms with poor recent earnings histories in the tendencies of investors to overreact to recent information Richard Roll traces the negative effects of corporate takeovers on the stock prices of the acquiring firms to the overconfidence of managers who fail to recognize the contributions of chance to their past successes Andrei Shleifer and Robert Vishny show how the difficulty of establishing a reliable reputation for correctly assessing the value of long term capital projects can lead investment analysis and hence corporate managers to focus myopically on short term returns As a testing ground for assessing the empirical accuracy of behavioral theories the successful studies in this landmark collection reach beyond the world of finance to suggest very powerfully the importance of pursuing behavioral approaches to other areas of economic life Advances in Behavioral Finance is a solid beachhead for behavioral work in the financial arena and a clear promise of wider application for behavioral economics in the future

Sunstein,2017-05-05 This Palgrave Pivot offers comprehensive evidence about what people actually think of nudge policies designed to steer decision makers choices in positive directions The data reveal that people in diverse nations generally favor nudges by strong majorities with a preference for educative efforts such as calorie labels that equip individuals to make the best decisions for their own lives On the other hand there are significant arguments for noneducational nudges such as automatic enrollment in savings plans as they allow people to devote their scarce time and attention to their most pressing concerns The decision to use either educative or noneducative nudges raises fundamental questions about human freedom in both theory and practice Sunstein s findings and analysis offer lessons for those involved in law and policy who are choosing which method to support as the most effective way to encourage lifestyle changes Advances in Behavioral Finance Richard H.
