Authentication in the Cal.com project is handled through a blend of custom strategies and integration with third-party libraries like NextAuth.js and Passport.js. Here's how it works based on the retrieved documents:

1. API Authentication Strategy:

- The `ApiAuthStrategy` class, implemented using the NestJS framework, is a core part of the authentication system. This class extends the `BaseStrategy` of the Passport library to manage various authentication methods such as OAuth client credentials, API keys, bearer tokens, and NextAuth tokens.
- The strategy authenticates requests by examining the provided credentials, determining the appropriate authentication method, and delegating to functions like `authenticateOAuthClient`, `authenticateBearerToken`, `authenticateNextAuth`, and others. This process ensures only authorized users can access resources.
- For OAuth client credentials, it verifies the client ID and secret. For bearer tokens, it checks if the token is an API key or access token and uses suitable strategies for each. It also handles authentication through NextAuth tokens by retrieving user details from the token's email.
