

The image is a vertical split-screen comparison. The left half shows a close-up of a sleek, white and grey train moving through a dark, industrial-looking tunnel with warm orange and yellow lighting. The right half shows the same train from a wider perspective, traveling through a complex, multi-level city street at night. The city is illuminated with various lights, including prominent red circular lights on a building in the background. A thin white vertical line separates the two images, and a small white circle is positioned at the bottom of this line, acting as a visual separator for the text below.
