

Basil Bernstein on Restricted and Elaborated Codes

Code – “refers to a set of organizing principles behind the language employed by members of a social group”

Basil Bernstein (1924–2000) was a British sociologist known for his work in the sociology of education, was a linguist and researcher at the Institute of Education, University of London, who put the case that the form of language use of working class (who speak a ‘restricted code’) as contrasted with middle class students (who speak an ‘elaborated code’), in part explained their comparative performance at school.

Here, Bernstein analyses one of the ways in which the dynamics of social class affects learner outcomes in school.

Two general types of codes can be distinguished: elaborated and restricted ... In the case of an elaborated code, the speaker will select from a relatively extensive range of alternatives ... In the case of a restricted code the number of these alternatives is often severely limited ... On a psychological level the codes may be distinguished by the extent to which each facilitates (elaborated code) or inhibits (restricted code) an orientation to symbolize intent in a verbally explicit form.

The pure form of a restricted code one where all the words, and ... the organizing structure irrespective of its degree of complexity, are wholly predictable for speakers and listeners. Examples of this pure form would be ritualistic modes of communication: relationships regulated by protocol, types of religious services, cocktail-party routines, some story-telling situations. Consider the case of a mother telling her child stories which they know by heart. “And Little Red Riding Hood went into the wood” (ritualistic pause). “And what do you think happened?” (rhetorical question) ...

[T]he most general condition for the emergence of this code is a social relationship based upon a common, extensive set of closely-shared identifications and expectations self-consciously held by the members. The speech is here refracted through a common cultural identity which reduces the need to verbalize intent so that it becomes explicit ... The speech in these social relations is likely to be fast and fluent, articulatory clues are reduced; some meanings are likely to be dislocated, condensed and local; there will be a low level of vocabulary and syntactic selection; the unique meaning of the individuals is likely to be implicit.

An elaborated code, where prediction is much less possible at the syntactic level, is likely to arise in a social relationship which raises the tension in its members to select from their linguistic resources a verbal arrangement which closely fits specific referents ... The preparation and delivery of relatively explicit meaning is the major function of this code. The code will facilitate the verbal transmission and elaboration of the individual’s unique experience ...

Hulstijn, 2015-02-15 This book written for both seasoned and novice researchers presents a theory of what is called Basic and Higher Language Cognition BLC and HLC a theory aimed at making some fundamental issues concerning first and second language learning and bilingualism more empirical The first part of the book provides background for and explication of the theory as well as an agenda for future research while the second part reports on selected studies of language proficiency in native speakers as well as non native speakers and studies of the relationship between literacy in a first and second language Conceptual and methodological problems in measuring language proficiency in research on second language acquisition and bilingualism are also discussed Further the notion of levels of language proficiency as rendered by the Common European Framework of Reference for Languages CEFR is critically examined suggesting ways of empirically investigating a number of questions that the CEFR raises but is not capable of answering      Academic Language In Second Language Learning Christian J. Faltis, M. Beatriz Arias, 2013-03-01 Language in academic settings also referred to as academic language has gained attention in the field of second language learning owing to new understandings of the complexities of language inherent in learning academic content and new efforts to assess English learners language proficiency in the context of school learning The concept of academic language as distinct from social language has been in the academic literature since the mid 1950s and surfaced as a major construct in the field of bilingual education in the 1980s Many readers will be familiar with the ideas of BICS and CALP first introduced by Jim Cummins in the 1980s This book presents a critique of academic language as a separable construct from social language and introduces current research efforts to understand how English learners interact interpret and show understanding of language in academic contexts in ways that re think and go beyond the distinction between social and academic language The book is organized into three main sections each with a range of chapters that consider how academic language plays into how children and youth learn academic content as emergent bilingual students in school settings A Foreward and Afterward offer commentary on the book and its contents The intended audience for this book is graduate students teacher educators and researchers interested in issues of language and content learning for English learners the new mainstream of schools across the nation There is something for a wide range of readers and students of second language acquisition in this volume      A Dialectical Examination of Basil Bernstein's Sociolinguistic Theories Paul Howard Arntson, 1977      Hazards of Applying Research Across Cultures Elizabeth Peretz, 1971      Class and Social Background Discrimination in the Modern Workplace Angelo Capuano, 2025-07-15 This book exposes how inequalities based on class and social background arise from employment practices in the digital age It considers instances where social media is used in recruitment to infiltrate private lives and hide job advertisements based on locality where algorithms assess socio economic data to filter candidates where human interviewers are replaced by artificial intelligence with design that disadvantages users of classed language and where already vulnerable groups become victims of digitalisation and remote work The author examines whether these practices create risks of discrimination based on certain protected attributes including social origin in international labour law and laws in Australia and South Africa social condition and family status in laws within Canada and others The book proposes essential law reform and improvements to workplace policy
