Social Work Practice with Depressed Mothers in Child and Family Care Michael Sheppard, Narcyza Kelly, 2001

This book reports the results of a study on work with depressed mothers and aims to draw attention to the significance of depression in mothers to the practice of social workers in child and family care. It draws on research with over 300 families and includes key aspects of interviews with nearly 100 depressed mothers and their social workers. Among the main issues examined are the implications of maternal depression for partnership, child protection, family support, needs of mothers and children. The findings include detailed analysis of the processes and conduct of practice, including the women's experiences of these processes. They show that services are poorly organised to meet real life situations where needs and problems cannot be compartmentalised. The structure and culture of services present obstacles to the delivery of the best possible support for families. Bringing together disparate services does not necessarily help. The implications for policy and practice in the areas of both childcare and mental health are outlined and recommendations are made for the future. This book is intended to be of interest to all social and healthcare professionals: childcare and mental health social workers, doctors, psychiatric nurses, health visitors and midwives, as well as students and lecturers in social work, health studies and women's studies. The
