Instrumentation Atlantic Flight Training Ltd., Jeppesen GmbH, 2004-01-01. One of the fundamental aspects of aircraft cockpit design is how to present flight and navigation data to the crew. The presentation of any information can be in analogue, digital, or electronic form, but in all cases it is up to the crew to interpret and act on the information given. This same data can be supplied to automatic flight control systems, relieving the pilot of hand flying the aircraft, but bringing with it the obligation to monitor what the aircraft is doing. This task can be particularly onerous because the pilot is effectively out of the loop and the aircraft performs with flawless regularity. The pilot, however, must always be alert and ready to take control of the aeroplane. For all these reasons, the pilot must have a thorough understanding of aircraft instrumentation and automatic flight control systems. This volume provides an in-depth knowledge of the operating principles behind and the value of all the most common aircraft instrumentation systems. Instrumentation Systems Enoch J. Durbin, 2014-05-12. Flight Testing Volume IV Instrumentation Systems serves as a guide to flight test instrumentation systems for establishing flight test programs. This book provides aircraft flight testers with the information required to appreciate the capabilities and limitations of the instrumentation techniques indicating some of the many alternatives possible in flight instrumentation It considers the systems concept in planning flight test instrumentation and functional organization of the component parts of an instrumentation system followed by a discussion of the components of a flight data acquisition and reduction system that are organized into functional categories Within these categories a comparison is made between the various data collection systems and data reducing systems The similarities advantages and limitations of each type of system component and significance of the fundamental properties of each device are also noted in this volume This compilation is written primarily for persons not well trained in electronics with special emphasis toward promoting the systems point of view in considering the problems of measurement in flight
