Time-driven Activity-based Costing Robert S. Kaplan,Steven R. Anderson,2007 In the classroom activity based costing ABC looks like a great way to manage a company's limited resources But executives who have tried to implement ABC in their organizations on any significant scale have often abandoned the attempt in the face of rising costs and employee irritation Time Driven Activity Based Costing is the solution to the problems associated with large scale ABC implementation In this book Kaplan and Anderson offer a revised model where managers can estimate the resource demands imposed by each transaction product or customer rather than rely on time consuming and costly employee surveys In their new model Kaplan and Anderson focus on the two parameters managers need to estimate how much it costs per time unit to supply resources to the business activities the total overhead expenditure of a department divided by the total number of minutes of employee time available and how much time it takes to carry out one unit of each kind of activity as estimated or observed by the manager Rather than endlessly updating and maintaining ABC data this book will allow managers to spend their time addressing the deficiencies the model reveals inefficient processes unprofitable products and customers and excess capacity Kaplan and Anderson lead the discussion of Time Driven ABC in the first seven chapters followed by individual cases studies of actual implementations by Acorn consultants in diverse settings

Life-Cycle Costing Jan Emblemssvåg, 2003-05-13 Everyone jokes about the 20/20 hindsight of cost management In Life Cycle Costing Jan Emblemssvåg proposes to do something about it Here is a new approach to life cycle costing that brings activity based costing risk and uncertainty into the forefront You will focus on future costs and learn how you can perform any type of cost management activity better than before by introducing uncertainty into models and exploiting them to the max Order your copy today

Activity Based Costing Andreas Leitner, 2005-05-09 Research Paper undergraduate from the year 2004 in the subject Business economics Accounting and Taxes grade 2 Glynd r University Wrexham known as NEWI Business school language English abstract During the last decades there was a change in organisations from managing vertical to managing horizontal The organisations started to become process orientated instead of function orientated and new management styles like total quality management just in time benchmarking or business process reengineering appeared Which lead into an increase of overheads Drury 2004a The most important cost factors changed from direct costs like labour costs or materials into indirect costs like set up costs or administration costs Therefore the traditional costing systems became more or less useless because they presented poor cost information which leads into decision errors Therefore the ABC system of cost calculation seems to be a solution The most important difference between traditional systems and the ABC system is the breakdown of overheads In traditional costing systems they are divided into cost centres and accumulated products by using direct cost drivers In the ABC system they will be assigned to activities which creates a greater number of cost centres with different cost drivers They will be accumulated to products in the percentage of usage of an activity In this paper the ABC system of cost calculation is discussed and how it can be implemented successfully within an organisation Attention is also drawn to the most important failure in implementation of an ABC approach which should be avoided To establish an ABC approach within an organisation more than just a new calculation system is needed An ABC approach has to be implemented in the management system ABM and in the budgeting process ABB All in all Activity based costing is much more than just a costing tool Successfully implemented it will help to understand costs better and make the right decisions
