Excerpt from Manual of Inorganic Chemistry Arranged to Facilitate the Experimental Demonstration of the Facts and Principles of the Science

Is preparing this manual it has been tie authors object to facilitate the teaching of chemistry by the experimental and inductive method The hook will enable the careful student to acquaint himself with tie main facts and principles of chemistry through the attentive use of his own perceptive faculties by a process not unlike that by which these facts and principles were first established The authors believe that the study of a science of observation ought to develop and discipline the observing faculties and that such a study fails of its true end if it become a mere exercise of the memory The minute instructions given in the descriptions of experiments and printed in the smaller type are intended to enable the student to see smell and touch for himself these detailed descriptions are meant for laboratory use In order to mark as clearly as possible the distinction between chemistry and chemical manipulation the necessary instructions on the latter subject have been put in an Appendix In cases in which it is impossible for every student to experiment for himself tie authors hope that this manual will make it easy for the teacher even if he be not a professional chemist to exhibit to his class in a familiar and inexpensive manner experiments enough to supply ocular demonstration of the leading facts and generalizations of the science
