Sustainable Agriculture Reviews Eric Lichtfouse, 2013-08-30 Sustainable agriculture is a rapidly growing field aiming at producing food and energy in a sustainable way for humans and their children It is a discipline that addresses current issues climate change increasing food and fuel prices poor nation starvation rich nation obesity water pollution soil erosion fertility loss pest control and biodiversity depletion This series gathers review articles that analyze current agricultural issues and knowledge then proposes alternative solutions

Local financing mechanisms for forest and landscape restoration Besacier, C., Garrett, L., Iweins, M., Shames, S., Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2021-03-17 To meet global restoration needs and recover degraded forests and landscapes adequate public and private investments are required to support restoration activities on the ground The new FAO publication Local financing mechanisms for forest and landscape restoration A review of local level investment mechanisms examines the pathways available to financing restoration for a positive local level impact The document provides an in depth study of how financial mechanisms can be coordinated to maximise the leverage of finance and the adoption of practices at scale across the landscape By examining some of the accessible investment mechanisms and planning strategies it aims to support discussions thinking and decision making on how to effectively find select and use investments to provide appropriate incentives and maximize forest and landscape restoration actions Finally the publication underlines how facilitators can bridge the gap between smallholders and investors boosting investments while promoting local ownership

Handbook of Climate Change and Biodiversity Walter Leal Filho, Jelena Barbir, Richard Preziosi, 2018-08-28 This book comprehensively describes essential research and projects on climate change and biodiversity Moreover it includes contributions on how to promote the climate agenda and biodiversity conservation at the local level Climate change as a whole and global warming in particular are known to have a negative impact on biodiversity in three main ways Firstly increases in temperatures are detrimental to a number of organisms especially those in sensitive habitats such as coral reefs and rainforests Secondly the pressures posed by a changing climate may lead to sets of responses in areas as varied as phenology range and physiology of living organisms often leading to changes in their lifecycles especially but not only in reproduction losses in productivity or even death In some cases the very survival of very sensitive species may be endangered Thirdly the impacts of climate change on biodiversity will be felt in the short term with regard to some species and ecosystems but also in the medium and long term in many biomes Indeed if left unchecked some of these impacts may be irreversible Many individual governments financial institutes and international donors are currently spending billions of dollars on projects addressing climate change and biodiversity but with little coordination. Quite often the emphasis is on adaptation efforts with little emphasis on the connections between physio ecological changes and the lifecycles and metabolisms of fauna and flora or the influence of poor governance on biodiversity. As such there is a recognized need to not only better understand the impacts of climate change on biodiversity but to also identify test and implement measures aimed at managing the many risks that climate change poses to fauna flora and micro organisms. In particular the question of how to restore and protect ecosystems from the impact of climate change also has to be urgently addressed. This book was written to address this need. The respective papers explore matters related to the use of an ecosystem based approach to increase local adaptation capacity, consider the significance of a protected areas network in preserving biodiversity in a changing northern European climate and assess the impacts of climate change on specific species including wild terrestrial animals. The book also presents a variety of case studies such as the Yellowstone to Yukon Conservation Initiative, the effects of climate change on the biodiversity of Aleppo pine forest in Senalba, Algeria, climate change and biodiversity response in the Niger Delta region and the effects of forest fires on the biodiversity and the soil characteristics of tropical peatlands in Indonesia. This is a truly interdisciplinary publication and will benefit all scholars, social movements, practitioners and members of governmental agencies engaged in research and or executing projects on climate change and biodiversity around the world.

Integrating Agriculture, Conservation and Ecotourism: Societal Influences W. Bruce Campbell, Silvia López Ortiz, 2012-06-23. Agroecology not only encompasses aspects of ecology but the ecology of sustainable food production systems and related societal and cultural values. To provide effective communication regarding status and advances in this field, connections must be established with many disciplines such as sociology, anthropology, environmental sciences, ethics, agriculture, economics, ecology, rural development, sustainability, policy and education or integrations of these general themes so as to provide integrated points of view that will help lead to a more sustainable construction of values than conventional economics alone. Such designs are inherently complex and dynamic and go beyond the individual farm to include landscapes, communities and biogeographic regions by emphasizing their unique agricultural and ecological values and their biological, societal and cultural components and processes.

Traditional Knowledge in Food Activism and Governance Andrea Pieroni, Michele Filippo Fontefrancesco, Ina Vandebroek, 2024-08-16. The current debate on Traditional Knowledge (TK) and food heritage has had momentum in recent years mainly thanks to the remarkable interest of some local and national institutions, small scale producers and emerging chefs. However in the scientific arena the process of documenting traditional knowledge and the heritage of local foods is often addressed by itself and is not well connected to deeper reflections of the actual participatory processes involved in local development or to the manners through which TK informs public discourse regarding local foods and how this may further influence activists, institutions and governance.

Influences W. Bruce Campbell, Silvia López Ortiz, 2012-06-23 Agroecology not only encompasses aspects of ecology but the ecology of sustainable food production systems and related societal and cultural values To provide effective communication regarding status and advances in this field connections must be established with many disciplines such as sociology anthropology environmental sciences ethics agriculture economics ecology rural development sustainability policy and education or integrations of these general themes so as to provide integrated points of view that will help lead to a more sustainable construction of values than conventional economics alone Such designs are inherently complex and dynamic and go beyond the individual farm to include landscapes communities and biogeographic regions by emphasizing their unique agricultural and ecological values and their biological societal and cultural components and processes Nature's Matrix Ivette Perfecto, John Vandermeer, Angus Wright, 2009-09-18 Landscapes are frequently seen as fragments of natural habitat surrounded by a sea of agriculture But recent ecological theory shows that the nature of these fragments is not nearly as important for conservation as is the nature of the matrix of agriculture that surrounds them Local extinctions from conservation fragments are inevitable and must be balanced by migrations if massive extinction is to be avoided High migration rates only occur in what the authors refer to as high quality matrices which are created by alternative agroecological techniques as opposed to the industrial monocultural model of agriculture The authors argue that the only way to promote such high quality matrices is to work with rural social movements Their ideas are at odds with the major trends of some of the large conservation organizations that emphasize targeted land purchases of protected areas They argue that recent advances in ecological research make such a general approach anachronistic and call rather for solidarity with the small farmers around the world who are currently struggling to attain food sovereignty Nature's Matrix proposes a radically new approach to the conservation of biodiversity based on recent advances in the science of ecology plus political realities particularly in the world's tropical regions Eco-Tourism And Livelihoods: Capacity Building For Local Authorities A.K. Bhattacharya, 2005 Tourism is the most rapidly growing and biggest civilian industry in the world and ecotourism forms the largest proportion of the present tourism Since ecotourism involves maximum number of stakeholders from local communities to the corporate world proper capacity building of the major stakeholders for effective planning and management of ecotourism has become a prerequisite for the sustainable ecotourism development This book attempts to fill in this gap The book addresses the key issues concerning ecotourism management with special focus on community participation It deals with a range of topics including the basic concept forms potential assessment planning and case studies of ecotourism At the same time it discusses the new concepts and techniques of ecotourism viz carrying capacity community participation and auditing The book will be useful for practitioners researchers and other stakeholders in planning and implementation of ecotourism Ecotourism and Biodiversity Conservation Suresh Chand Rai, 2012 Tourism is the most important non farm activity in the mountainous region In mountain belts the aesthetic value of the land is by itself one of the critical assets for the otherwise impoverished communities The growth of population and the increasing demand at the individual level of various non farm items have expanded the demand of goods beyond the traditional technological practices of mountain community and their cultural sensitivities These initiatives of the government have only mirrored Western models of tourism development rather than developing appropriate need based strategies for harnessing the economic potential This new book examines ecotourism and biodiversity conservation

Political Ecology and Tourism Sanjay Nepal, Jarkko Saarinen, 2016-02-26 Political ecology explicitly addresses the relations between the social and the natural arguing that social and environmental conditions are deeply and inextricably linked Its emphasis on the material state of nature as the outcome of political processes as well as the construction and understanding of nature itself as political is greatly relevant to tourism Very few tourism scholars have used political ecology as a lens to examine tourism centric natural resource management issues This book brings together experts in the field with a foreword from Piers Blaikie to provide a global exploration of the application of political ecology to tourism It addresses the underlying issues of power ownership and policies that determine the ways in which tourism development decisions are made and implemented Furthermore contributions document the complex array of relationships between tourism stakeholders including indigenous communities and multiple scales of potential conflicts and compromises This groundbreaking book covers 15 contributions organized around four cross cutting themes of communities and livelihoods class representation and power dispossession and displacement and environmental justice and community empowerment This book will be of great interest to students and scholars in tourism geography anthropology sociology environmental studies and natural resources management

Two Way Track Noel Preece, 2005 This report is the result of a study commissioned by the Biodiversity Unit in the Environmental Strategies Directorate of the Commonwealth Department of the Environment Sport and Territories to investigate potential for integrating biodiversity conservation with ecotourism Its main objective is to identify and where possible assess the potential long term benefits and opportunities of strategically integrating biodiversity conservation requirements with the future needs of the nature based and ecotourism industry It presents a national approach to formulating and implementing strategic plans for this important economic sector

Ecotourism Development in India Seema Bhatt, Syed Liyakhat, 2008 Ecotourism is a term debated upon by practitioners all over the world The initiatives carried out in the name of ecotourism have adversely affected people and the environment The indigenous and local communities have raised voices against such steps at local national and international levels However sustainable ecotourism tourism carried out within certain defined norms can lead to the development of the people Ecotourism Development in India attempts to present a comprehensive and analytical perspective on the development of ecotourism in India This book showcases the key policies and legal frameworks linked to ecotourism development at national and international levels The consequences of large scale models of ecotourism in terms of responses and impacts both negative and positive are presented through select case studies It is intended to facilitate effective formulation and implementation of conservation and development policies and practices Ecotourism as a Tool for Sustainable Rural Community Development and Natural Resources Management in the Tonle Sap Biosphere Reserve Neth Baromey,2008 Developing Ecotourism Stephen Wearing,Joanne McLean,1997 Ecotourism and Sustainable Tourism Jaime Seba,2011-12-15 There is an increased interest in ecotourism and sustainable tourism which provides travelers with destinations and activities that have a lower negative impact on the environment This book a collection of articles and studies highlight many of these new trends in tourism using examples from many different regions of the world including the coast of Georgia and the rainforests in Nigeria It looks at nature based tourism community participation in local ecological tourism ecological sports tourism and much more The Ecotourism-Extraction Nexus Bram Büscher,Veronica Davidov,2013-08-15 Ecotourism and natural resource extraction may be seen as contradictory pursuits yet in reality they often take place side by side sometimes even supported by the same institutions Existing academic and policy literatures generally overlook the phenomenon of ecotourism in areas concurrently affected by extraction industries but such a scenario is in fact increasingly common in resource rich developing nations This edited volume conceptualises and empirically analyses the ecotourism extraction nexus within the context of broader rural and livelihood changes in the places where these activities occur The volume s central premise is that these seemingly contradictory activities are empirically and conceptually more alike than often imagined and that they share common ground in ethnographic lived experiences in rural settings and broader political economic structures of power and control The book offers theoretical reflections on why ecotourism and natural resource extraction are systematically decoupled and epistemologically and analytically re links them through ethnographic case studies drawing on research from around the world It should be of interest to students and professionals engaged in the disciplines of geography anthropology and development studies Ecotourism Guidelines Ecotourism Society,1993
