Serfass,2016-05-10 Family wealth is not self perpetuating Without careful planning it is possible for the success of a family to dissipate in a matter of a generation or two In fact more than two thirds of wealthy families eventually fall victim to the longstanding proverb shirtsleeves to shirtsleeves in three generations The first generation literally or figuratively rolls up their sleeves working hard to build wealth and success The second generation reaps the rewards of the first often using this new wealth to advance their life through better education and career opportunities The third generation spends the remainder of the money having never learned the values leading to wealth in the first place thus leaving future generations to start from scratch This classic rags to riches to rags story typically focuses on the loss of financial capital but it is actually the loss of human and intellectual capital that causes the demise of family wealth Family Success aims to challenge the norm foster the characteristics of success in future generations and help families communicate more effectively about their future

Whether you are looking to build a long term wealth plan to break the shirtsleeves to shirtsleeves cycle or just trying to better the next generation this book will help you understand the fundamentals of multigenerational success
