Examining the benefits and risks of chemoprevention for breast cancer in high-risk women

by Sally SK Waignein, BScH, BScPharm, PharmD
and Mário L de Lemos, PharmD, MSc (Oncol)

Breast cancer is the most common cancer in women in Canada, with a lifetime risk of one in nine women. In 2013, it was estimated that 23,800 women in Canada would be newly diagnosed with breast cancer. Breast cancer is the second most lethal cancer in women, with 4,900 related deaths each year in Canada, or nearly one in seven cancer deaths in women.<sup>(1)</sup> However, the overall mortality of breast cancer has been declining over the past three decades. This is largely due to mass screening mammography programs and more effective adjuvant therapies after surgery to prevent cancer recurrence.<sup>(1)</sup>

Pharmacists, particularly those in community practice, will commonly encounter women with questions about their risk of developing breast cancer and how to prevent it. Therefore, pharmacists should familiarize themselves with how to best advise on effective risk reduction and preventive measures. This review outlines the general risk factors and their contribution to individual risks for breast cancer, as well as nonpharmacologic and pharmacologic prevention strategies for breast cancer. It also highlights the unique role played by pharmacists in the primary prevention and early detection of breast cancer, including monitoring for side effects of pharmacologic agents.

Risk factors

The development and enlargement of breast tissue is controlled by various interrelated hormones (e.g., estrogen, progesterone). Most breast cancers (82%) occur after the age of 50.<sup>(1)</sup> The five-year risk for breast cancer increases with age: 1.8% at age 60 and 2.2% at age 70.<sup>(2)</sup> Some risk factors associated with breast cancer include the following:

- Longer duration of estrogen activity (e.g., early menarche, late menopause)
- Prolonged exposure to exogenous estrogen (e.g., over a number of years) in postmenopausal women
- Nulliparity
- Postmenopausal obesity
- A first-degree relative diagnosed with breast cancer, particularly if before menopause.<sup>(3,4)</sup>

Some women are at particularly high risk of developing breast cancer<sup>(5,6)</sup>

- Women with a personal history of noninvasive breast cancer confined to the lobules (lobular

Guy R. Newell, Waun Ki Hong, 2012-12-06 The papers contained in this volume were presented at the Golden Jubilee Cancer Prevention Conference The Biology and Prevention of Aerodigestive Tract Cancers sponsored by The University of Texas M D Anderson Cancer Center in Houston Texas February 21 23 1991 The purpose of the conference was to further the understanding of the biology epidemiology and prevention of aerodigestive tract cancers Advances in understanding the biology of aerodigestive tract cancers have led to successful early chemoprevention trials Chemopreventive agents in current use are capable of reversing premalignant lesions as well as reducing the number of second primary cancers of the head and neck These trials hold the promise that effective prevention methods for these cancers will be forthcoming in the foreseeable future Carcinogenic exposures appear to affect the entire epithelial lining of the upper aerodigestive tract a phenomena described as field cancerization This process contributes to the development of both synchronous and metachronous aerodigestive tract cancers It also provides a sound rationale for the chemoprevention of these cancers Animal models are important for identifying the critical components of field cancerization and for testing potentially new chemopreventive agents and regimens The hamster lung carcinogenesis model and the hamster cheek model are discussed Aerodigestive tract cancers account for about 20% of newly diagnosed invasive cancers Cigarette smoking and alcohol consumption are the most important risk factors for these cancers      Biomedical Index to PHS-supported Research ,1989      Biomedical Index
