Response To Disaster Fact Versus Fiction And Its Perpetuation:

Response to Disaster Henry W. Fischer, 1998 A third generation disaster researcher challenges what he sees as a myth perpetrated since the genesis of the field in the 1950s that faced with an emergency most people will panic and flee become helplessly impassive or loot He sets out the empirical evidence in statistics and case studies He agrees with colleagues that the mass media are a primary factor in spreading the myth but goes beyond them to address what emergency agencies can do despite it Graduate and undergraduate students interested in social response to disasters the disaster research community and people responsible for responding to disaster might find the treatment interesting Annotation copyrighted by Book News Inc Portland OR

Response to Disaster Henry W. Fischer III, 2008-08-21 Response to Disaster combines the original research of author Henry W Fischer with the literature used today to describe behavioral and organizational challenges commonly experienced before during and after disasters Actual problems are presented and compared to those often misperceived to occur know as disaster mythology Fisher examines case studies conducted during the post impact and long term recovery periods of major and minor disasters worldwide He asserts that the role of the mass media assists in eliciting needed help with an effective response but also perpetuates disaster mythology Fisher presents striking comparisons between the perception of disaster in the eyes of the general public the actual situations emergency responders face and the way mass media reporters broadcast information Additionally the problems encountered by emergency response organizations are compared and contrasted with general public and media perceptions of disaster response Fisher presents the response to September 11 2001 the south Asian tsunami and hurricane Katrina in this comprehensive third edition

Response to Disaster Henry W. Fischer III, 1994-07-12 This book provides the reader with a basic understanding of how people and organizations usually respond to a disaster in contrast to how they are usually perceived to respond The author also describes how and why the mass media helps to provide both accurate and inaccurate information If each of us were to gain a better understanding of the behavioral and organizational problems commonly encountered during a disaster we may facilitate more effective mitigation planning and disaster response activity in our own communities and in the nation
