Abstract: Integrated watershed management (IWM) is becoming increasingly important in such a country where the economy depends predominately on agriculture, but there are also fast-growing urban populations that depend on water and food supplies on an unprecedented scale and attention is shifting to overall socio-economic benefit along with better water and soil conservation. The ever-increasing pressure on the natural resources is further increased the intensity by the even faster economic growth the country has witnessed in the past decades. Unprecedented economic activities in areas such as agriculture, industry, power, and communication, are affecting land-use patterns in many ways.

The aim of this paper is to emphasize the importance of the effective IWM, to point out the relations between its components and to realize on beneficiaries in any watershed. In particular, social, economic, environmental, and resource systems are all considered in order to improve the applicability of IWM approach.

This paper presents that watershed management integrates various aspects of forestry, agriculture, ecology, soils, water use and other sciences to provide guidelines for the choosing appropriate IWM alternatives within the social and economic context. Addressing social and economic aspects is an essential part of evaluating the effects of IWM.

Keywords: IWM, social, economic, environmental

INTRODUCTION

IWM is becoming increasingly important concept in all over the world and attention is shifting to overall socio-economic welfare along with better water and soil conservation. Global population is continuing to grow rapidly. The ever-increasing pressure on the natural resources is further increased the intensity by the even faster economic growth, the country has witnessed in the past decades. Unprecedented economic activity in areas such as agriculture, industry, power, and communication, is affecting land-use patterns in many ways.

Major increasingly challenging problems of socio-economic development in watersheds, e.g. scarcity of natural resources and environmental deterioration, have arisen. IWM is a useful tool for dealing with these issues and maintaining sustainable development at the watershed scale. According to Bouwer (2000), IWM is such a holistic approach which requires not only supply management, but also demand management (water conservation, transfer of water to uses with higher economic returns, etc.), water quality management, recycling and reuse of water, economics, public involvement, public health, environmental and ecological aspects, socio-cultural aspects, water storage (including long-term storage), conjunctive use of surface water and groundwater, water pollution control, flexibility, regional approaches, weather modification, sustainability, etc.

Integrated Approaches to Sustainable Watershed Management in Xeric Environments V Ratna Reddy, Geoff Syme, Chiranjeevi Tallapragada, 2019-06-14 Integrated Approaches to Sustainable Watershed Management in Xeric Environments A Training Manual provides the reader with the tools they need to understand an integrated approach to watershed management. The book presents a conceptual framework of water management based on the authors' vast experience. Topics covered include a scientific background of watershed management and the integration of geohydraulic and socioeconomic factors. Key points are further enhanced with case studies, problem sets, Bayesian Networks, and quizzes to educate watershed managers, industry professionals, and agencies. Authored by a team of leaders in the field who are responsible for groundbreaking research in the area, this book draws on their experience synthesizing scientific practical on the ground expertise. This is an essential tool for researchers and professionals in environmental water or natural resource management. Presents an integrated approach combining different sciences that allows for the improved design of watersheds through the integration of biophysical land use and socioeconomic analyses. Contains activities for self evaluation. Includes case studies drawing from field experiences giving the reader deeper insights into challenges faced, practical problems and solutions.

The New Generation of Watershed Management Programmes and Projects, 2006-01-01 On the occasion of the International Year of Mountains 2002, FAO and its partners undertook a large scale assessment and global review of the current status and future trends of integrated and participatory watershed management. The overall objectives were to promote the exchange and dissemination of experiences in implementing watershed management projects in the decade from 1990 to 2000 and to identify the vision for a new generation of watershed management programmes and projects. This resource book represents a summary and critical analysis of the rich discussions and vast materials that emerged during the review, as well as the review's findings and recommendations. It presents the state of the art in watershed management, promotes further reflection and creative thinking, and proposes new ideas and approaches for future watershed management programmes and projects. This publication has been written primarily for field level watershed management practitioners and local decision makers involved in watershed management at the district or municipality level. It will also be a useful source of information for other readers such as senior officers and consultants specialized in other areas, evaluators, policy makers, and students of watershed management.

Integrated Watershed Management in the Global Ecosystem Rattan Lal, 1999-08-23 Focusing on the technical, social, and economic issues involved in watershed management, this interdisciplinary author team focuses on bettering land use practices and the condition of soil water resources. Integrated Watershed Management in the Global Ecosystem is a volume composed from an international symposium of the world's leading experts.

Global Perspectives on River Conservation P. J. Boon,B. R. Davies,Geoffrey E. Petts,2000-10-03 Throughout the world river conservation is becoming an increasingly important concern In arid regions for instance rivers often form the only water resource for human sustenance indeed the World Bank has predicted that future wars will be about water In many parts of the developing world rivers are used as repositories for waste and river ecosystems consequently reflect the worst excesses of human exploitation In the industrialised nations the focus of attention is beginning to move from chemical clean up to restoring the structural damage to rivers caused by decades of river engineering Recognition is growing that river management needs a catchment wide perspective if the needs of human populations river habitats and wildlife are to reach a sustainable balance The development of river conservation strategies has become a global imperative Global Perspectives on River Conservation is the first book that provides a truly global synthesis of knowledge on river conservation with the aim of encouraging strategic river planning. It does this in two ways. First it sets out a worldwide region by region overview of the science policy and practice of river conservation. Second it provides a topical review of different river settings such as tropical temperate temporary perennial large small and contemporary issues in river conservation such as classification and evaluation environmental legislation the role of public participation. Global Perspectives on River Conservation is an invaluable reference for river managers planners and developers conservationists statutory water agencies government departments academics researchers postgraduates and final year under graduates working in the field of environmental management of inland waters Watershed

Resources Management K. William Easter, John A. Dixon, Maynard M. Hufschmidt, 1986-11-17 International Conference, Watershed Management and Conservation, 8-10 December 1998, New Delhi, India, 1998 An Integrated Approach towards Ground Water Sustainability and Management for a Hard Rock Terrain Nanjundi Prabhu, 2022-07-13 Doctoral Thesis Dissertation from the year 2020 in the subject Engineering Civil Engineering grade First Bangalore University Central College language English abstract The thesis presents a two dimensional Risk Assessment Method RAM where the assessment of risk to the groundwater resources incorporates both the quantification of the probability of the occurrence of contaminant source terms as well as the assessment of the resultant impacts. The approach emphasizes the need for a greater dependency on the potential pollution sources rather than the traditional approach where assessment is based mainly on the intrinsic geo hydrologic parameters. The risk is calculated using Monte Carlo simulation methods whereby random pollution events were generated to the same distribution as historically occurring events or a priori potential probability distribution. Integrated mathematical models then simulate contaminant concentrations at the predefined monitoring points within the aquifer. The spatial and temporal distributions of the concentrations were calculated from repeated realisations and the number of times when a user defined concentration magnitude was exceeded is quantified as a risk. The results of the applications of the method are presented in the form of tables graphs and spatial maps. Varying the model grid sizes indicates no significant effects on the simulated groundwater head. The simulated frequency of daily occurrence of pollution incidents is also independent of the model dimensions. However the simulated total contaminant mass generated within the aquifer and the associated volumetric numerical error appear to increase with the increasing grid sizes Preparing for the Next Generation of Watershed Management Programmes and Projects, Asia, 2005 Integrated Watershed Management, 1992
