Sociology of Interprofessional Health Care Practice Simon Kitto, 2011. In recent years governments around the world have been bending their will toward increasing collaborative practice amongst health care professionals. Although inter professional learning has been on the agenda since the 1950s to date there has been mixed success in bringing the disparate range of health professionals in the health care system together in a coherent and systematic way. Surprisingly there has been limited sociological analysis of this phenomenon with no identifiable seminal text that critically analyses the issues facing the development of successful inter professional practice in health. This edited collection redresses this by providing the conditions for critical engagement with inter professional issues through developing a critical sociology of inter professional health care practice. The core strength of the book is the meditations, case studies, evaluations and theoretical reflections on the practice of inter professional collaboration in health by pre eminent scholars from Australia, Canada and the United Kingdom. The book provides a sophisticated critical inquiry that uses a wide array of multi disciplinary conceptual tools to study the phenomenon of inter professional practice in a way that is easily understood by both instructors and students in the fields of medicine, allied health and nursing.

Interprofessional Evidence-Based Practice Penelope Moyers, Patricia Finch-Guthrie, 2024-06-01 Interprofessional Evidence Based Practice: A Workbook for Health Professionals promotes active team learning of interprofessional evidence based practice EBP. This book is distinctive in that it departs from the tradition of evidence based practice occurring from a single disciplinary perspective. Interprofessional evidence based practice is described in terms of a dynamic team process that blends the patient's preferences and values, the expertise of practitioners from multiple disciplines, and incorporates multidisciplinary evidence. Teams learn to use the nine phases in the interprofessional process to challenge current disciplinary paradigms and biases to create an integrated approach to patient care, healthcare delivery, or population health. Drs. Penelope Moyers and Patricia Finch-Guthrie focus on developing and fostering collaboration between academic institutions and healthcare organizations so that students and faculty participate on interprofessional teams with mentors and staff from a healthcare organization. Interprofessional Evidence Based Practice: A Workbook for Health Professionals also addresses the communication and cross-organizational factors important for supporting the work of the team. Common team and mentoring issues encountered in EBP are clearly articulated along with the iterative problem-solving approaches necessary to mitigate temporary stumbling blocks. The book provides detail for developing and launching an Interprofessional Evidence Based Practice program that goes beyond the evidence process to include implementation science to support practice change. Approaches for developing partnerships for supporting this type of program between universities and health care institutions are contained within, including sample partnership agreements and resource sharing strategies. Inside Interprofessional Evidence Based Practice: A Workbook for Health Professionals, each chapter includes performance objectives, key words, checklists, and materials and resources that an interprofessional team can use. PowerPoint lectures, mentor newsletters, forms, tools, and other resources are included on a companion website to guide team learning about key EBP topics as well as to support the program coordinators and team mentors in their work with the interprofessional teams. Interprofessional Evidence Based Practice: A Workbook for Health Professionals is the go-to resource for those who want to engage in interprofessional evidence based practice and for leaders who want to develop and implement an interprofessional evidence based practice program.
