THE LUNGA CONTROVERSY

Lunga is a privately built, planned city near Pune, located near the Rajmachi region. It is a project of the Lunghar Construction Company and is often described as the first self-sustaining township after independence. The plan for the city, which was to have an area of 200 sq km, was a grid-plan with a central city centre, a shopping area, a sports facility, and other parts (read 'Lunga: The City' on the website <http://www.lunga.com/rajmachi.html>). The city has many features of a township, including a shopping area, a sports facility, and other parts. The city has many features of a township, including a shopping area, a sports facility, and other parts.

Lunga city has been planned and developed by the internationally renowned design consultant HKS, US, and has received awards such as the 2005 award for the Urban Design Building Award. Lunghar Corporation also has taken up various corporate social responsibility (CSR) projects for the people in the region, especially in the areas of health, education, employment, housing, and environment. In the CSR initiative, along with the construction, some of the major projects were in the field of solid waste management, sanitation, and water supply.

However, the project has attracted controversy from the day it began, ranging from issues of environmental damage to procurement of land by illegal means and showing bias through corrupt methods.

In 2003, Indian Ministry of Environment requested the company to stop the construction as it violated the environmental norms. The Ministry of Environment and Forests had issued a notice under section 31(1) of the Environment Protection Act, 1986, asking the company to stop the construction as it violated the environmental norms. The Ministry of Environment and Forests had issued a notice under section 31(1) of the Environment Protection Act, 1986, asking the company to stop the construction as it violated the environmental norms.

Although the project had started to gain momentum from the media using an online portal after 2003, the plan has been temporarily deferred following the intervention of the Ministry of Environment.

Lunga's location is in the heart of the city. It is a controversial issue for the company. It should be noted that the project has attracted controversy from the day it began, ranging from issues of environmental damage to procurement of land by illegal means and showing bias through corrupt methods.
