

Chapter 5: Weathering, Soil, and Mass Movements

~Lesson 1: Weathering

Review:

- Weathering: breaking down of rocks
- There are 2 types of weathering: mechanical & chemical.

Mechanical Weathering

- Mechanical Weathering: physical forces break rock into smaller and smaller pieces without changing the rock's mineral composition.
- Big rocks weather slower than little ones due to surface area
- In nature three physical processes are especially important causes of weathering: frost wedging, unloading, and biological activity.

Frost Wedging

- Frost Wedging: mechanical breakup of rock caused by the expansion of freezing water in cracks and crevices
 - When water freezes it expands by about 9%
- Most common in mountainous regions in the middle latitudes
- Sections of rock that are wedged loose may tumble into large piles called talus
 - Talus: accumulation of rock debris at the base of a cliff

Unloading

- Removal of great weights of overlying rock
- Reduced pressure on igneous rock causes it to expand and allows exfoliation.
 - Exfoliation: type of weathering caused by unloading where slabs of outer rock break off in layers
 - igneous rock is "unloading" all the built-up pressure
