

Offshore Survey documents under review

IMCA S 003

Guidelines for the use of multibeam echosounders for offshore surveys. First published 10 years ago, this technical document is undergoing a thorough review as technology and practices have moved on. It will include a whole new section on MBES system calibration, inclusion of other data developments, and removal or revision of outdated information and terminology.

IMCA S 004

Intersect survey data standard industry protocol. has been republished and is now available for download after being revised and brought up to date.

IMCA S 008

Digital video collection: A review of current and future technologies. was the first IMCA document that was designed to "reflect and inform" members, clients and other stakeholders rather than provide more formal guidance. IMCA has reformatted the Digital Video Workgroup, and this group has already begun the task of revising this document. Technical change in this field is rapid, and there is much to capture in this new revision. The workgroup will look at developments in video quality standards; on the methods of transmission of video data from surface to surface – satellite, fibre-optic, multiplexing and digitising; on the use of very high resolution digital video in both a camera and in surface monitoring; and will continue to address common misconceptions – "why can I see it? It looks bright" provides a more quality video of what goes on at the bottom of the ocean, but the offshore industry can't". It is hoped that the new document will be available in the spring of 2013.

IMCA S 009 & S 010

Guidelines for the shared use of ROV for DP and survey operations and Guidelines for the shared use of sensors for DP and survey operations. These two documents will be revised and merged into one, and technical input will be sought from the marine and DP communities as well as this important update.

IMCA S 013

Deep water acoustic positioning. This thorough technical review has saved the best of times, and the revision has changed very little except spelling the references and links.

IMCA offshore expert at Oceanology

IMCA was out in force at this year's Oceanology trade show at the ExCeL centre in London. Oceanology International is the world's largest exhibition showcasing marine science and ocean technology solutions – this is one of the main trade shows for members of IMCA's Offshore Survey Division and Remote Systems & ROV Division.

IMCA's Nicholas Blough gave one of the presentations in the Multibeam and Surface Acoustic Wave conference. He talked on Developments about IMCA's Offshore Survey Division work programme. His presentation covered some of the existing published work of the Offshore Survey Management Committee, as well as some of the documents under preparation.

As part of the on-going alignment of the IMCA technical divisions and committees with the IMCA five-year Vision & Strategy, the Offshore Survey Committee has been reviewing many of its documents (see box left).

IMCA also had a stand at the exhibition, offering delegates to meet with and ask questions of members of the IMCA technical and support teams. Many of the Offshore Survey and ROV supplier and contractor members were present as exhibitors, delegates and speakers at the associated conference.

IMCA experts will be presenting and exhibiting at the next show in 2014, and also be exhibiting at the Ocean Business show in Southampton, in April 2013.
