Kutan, Ali Mirzae, 2016-12-06 We examine the association between capital inflows and industry growth in a sample of 22 emerging market economies from 1998 to 2010 We expect more external finance dependent industries in countries that host more capital inflows to grow disproportionately faster This is indeed the case in the pre crisis period of 1998 2007 and is driven by debt rather than equity inflows We also observe a reduction in output volatility but this association is more pronounced for equity rather than debt inflows These relationships however break down during the crisis hinting at the importance of an undisrupted global financial system for emerging markets to harness the growth benefits of capital inflows In line with this observation we also document that the inflows growth nexus is stronger in countries with well functioning banks Modern Financial Investment Management Ephraim Matanda, 2020-01-10 This book stresses the importance of aligning developing countries economic activities towards sustainable development purposes A revamp of the financial systems of emerging economies is necessary to allow the financial resources needed for investment purposes to become readily available on these markets The failure of most countries to grow and develop is often caused by the inability of potential investors to access capital for investment purposes By modernizing the financial sectors of developing nations this book argues it is possible to industrialize their approaches to growth and development Exchange Rates and International Financial Economics J.
