

Things Fall Apart Reading Questions

Chapters 1-7

1. Compare Okonkwo to his father, Unoka. Be specific in their traits. How did Okonkwo's father shape his son?

We learn literally in the first paragraph that "Okonkwo's fame rested on solid personal achievements" (2). He had physical prowess, an imposing appearance, a fiery and even angry nature, and no patience for unsuccessful people. He is also wealthy and ambitious in gaining titles. His father Unoka, on the other hand, was "lazy and improvident" (4) and a serious debtor who had no titles in his lifetime, but he loved music and festivities and was gentle. Basically, Okonkwo wanted to be the total opposite of his father, whom he saw as an embarrassment. Okonkwo views festivals, music making, children with some conversations, etc. as slacking off.

2. What is the importance of proverbs in the Ibo's lives? Quote in your answer, and explain the meaning of your quote. What does this love of proverbs tell us about the Ibo people?

The author notes that "Among the Ibo, conversation is regarded very highly, and proverbs are the palm-oil with which words are eaten" (7). This quote means that proverbs—wise but sometimes cryptic sayings or expressions that share insight or values—sweeten conversation, that the Ibo enjoy using complex words and expressions to share ideas and feelings with one another.

One of the things the author was attempting to do with this novel was flip the script on colonialist literature that showed African peoples as uncivilized, backward, mysterious, etc. We'll see throughout the text that the Ibo are highly civilized, and this description of their love of language and idiom is one example of that.

3. One of the ironies of Achebe's novel is that, while he writes to contradict the stereotype that white colonialist literature perpetuated of African peoples, he writes using allusion and language that will appeal to the Western reader. There is an example of this in his use of the phrase "red in tooth and claw" in chapter two. Look up and describe the origin of this allusion and why Achebe makes use of it. (Hint, it all ties into Okonkwo's tragic flaw . . .)

The quote in the text is "[Okonkwo's fear of failure] was deeper and more intimate than the fear of evil and capricious gods and magic, the fear of the forest, and the forces of nature, malevolent, red in tooth and claw" (13). The phrase alludes to a poem by Alfred Lord Tennyson, in which he questions the brutality and callousness of nature (animals who have their victims' blood on their teeth and claws) in regards to the Christian love man is supposed to feel for others.
