

Essay Sample on Mental Health & Acute Care Nursing Essay

Introduction

Mental health nurses, also called psychiatric nurses, are tasked with helping the patients manage their mental illnesses and live fulfilling lives (Nurse Journal, 2020b). They also provide psychological assessment, medication, therapy, and crisis intervention to patients with mental health problems (Nurse Journal, 2020b). Conversely, acute care nurses assist patients with critical and urgent medical needs, such as motor vehicle accidents and chronic diseases such as diabetes (Nurse Journal, 2020a).

One of the differences between a mental health nurse and an acute care nurse pertains to their work. The former is tasked with the treatment of patients with psychological or mental problems (Nurse Journal, 2020b). Conversely, an acute care nurse helps patients in the treatment of acute conditions— especially preparation of patients for surgical procedures and provision of postoperative care (Nurse Journal, 2020a). In the treatment of a new patient, a mental health nurse starts with an interview and an assessment aimed at gaining an in-depth understanding of client's history, presentation of the illness, other diseases, and behavior (Nurse Journal, 2020b). On the contrary, acute care nurses utilize technology to address patient needs and take necessary steps to thwart medical problems that may arise (Nurse Journal, 2020a).

Another difference between a mental health nurse and an acute care nurse is their target patients. The former helps individuals with psychological disorders, dementia, substance abuse, and mood disorders (Nurse Journal, 2020b). Conversely, the latter works with patients who require immediate and critical management, e.g., those in an emergency room and intensive care (Nurse Journal, 2020a). Therefore, acute care nurses work in hospitals and medical organizations offering critical and emergency care.

Incorporating Mental Health Nurse Role

Majority of the conditions and diseases presented by the patients in the clinical setting have a psychological component. For instance, mental health nurses are needed in psychiatric emergencies. In a psychiatric emergency, a patient displays disturbance of mood, thought, and behavior which if unattended leads to harm to self or others. In such instances, mental health nurses are needed because of their specialization in treating psychological illnesses.

Peplau's Interpersonal Theory of Nursing

Peplau's theory defines nursing as an interpersonal therapeutic relationship that occurs when registered nurses interact with individuals who need health services. In this theory, the relationship between a nurse and a patient is three-phased— orientation, working, and termination. In the orientation phase, the patients realize that they require help and try to adjust to their new experiences (Hagerty et al., 2017). Concurrently, nurses meet the patients and try their best to gain vital information from them as individuals with peculiar needs. The orientation phase is crucial to
