Competence, Condemnation, and Commitment Robert F. Schopp, 2009 The central institutions of mental health law treat individuals with mental illness differently than others However institutions rarely provide a clear conception of mental illness or a clear justification for differential treatment In this book the author creates a bold new framework for examining the major intersections between legal institutions and the idea of mental illness In doing so he reviews various efforts to reconcile involuntary commitment with the right to refuse treatment or to elevate one power or right over the other He also advances a compelling case for requiring as a prerequisite to commitment a determination of decisional incompetence Throughout the book the author uses hypothetical actors with given mental traits disorders or diseases and specified behavioral patterns for comparative analysis and differentiation By using these fictional characters he both demonstrates and critiques the operations of the various components of mental health law The volume clarifies the respective roles and responsibilities of legal actors clinicians and social scientists and offers guidance concerning the appropriate relationships among these roles and responsibilities PsycINFO Database Record c 2004 APA all rights reserved Mental Health Law Kay Wilson, 2021 This title delves into mental health debates over abolition or reform applying the socio historical context to provide understanding It presents both sides of the argument using multi disciplinary sources to discuss these claims It argues for the reform of mental health to maximize the support and choices given to those with mental impairments
