

DF88MS – Installation instructions Wireless smoke detector

Introduction

The DF88MS is an optical wireless smoke detector. It is equipped with a smart and LED light for local indication of alarms, and wireless receiver and transceiver device. When several DF88MS are placed in the same facility, they are automatically connected. The number of interconnected DF88MS detectors must not exceed 32. Before any interconnected device detects smoke, all detectors in the system are triggered. It is not necessary for smoke to reach each detector for them to be triggered. A DF88MS system is a genuine early detection and warning system.

DF88MS

Location of the smoke detector

A single smoke detector will guarantee a certain amount of protection. If correctly installed, it will provide early warning. To obtain the recommended level of protection, install a smoke detector in every room where there is a potential fire risk (except for the kitchen or bathroom). If a single smoke detector is installed, it must be located between the sleeping area and the room(s) most exposed to risk of fire (living room, hallway near to the kitchen for example). Do not install a smoke detector in a room where there is a risk of fire occurring (kitchen) or an evacuation. Check that the sound emitted is loud enough to wake the occupants of the bedroom.

If your home has more than one floor, you should install at least one smoke detector per floor.

If your home occupies just one floor, it is preferable to place the detector in a corridor or hallway (close to bedrooms, living areas and living rooms). Place it as close as possible to living rooms but check that it is loud enough to wake anyone in the bedroom.

Positioning of smoke detectors

Smoke generally rises to the ceiling and then spreads horizontally. The best place to install the detector is therefore in the centre of the room. Install smoke detectors over 30 cm away from the walls and corners. Also, install the device at least 30 cm away from light fixtures or doors. If the detector shows a fire warning (flashing the alarm detector), if the ceiling is sloped or cone shaped, install the smoke detector less than 60 cm from the summit (perpendicular vertically). If this height is less than 60 cm, the ceiling must be considered flat for the purposes of smoke alarm.

Places to avoid

- Bathrooms, kitchens, porches, garages or other rooms where there is a risk of a smoke detector being triggered by steam, condensation, smoke emissions or normal emissions. Make sure you install the device over 30 cm away from sources of smoke emissions (normal emissions).
- Keep the detector away from any dusty or dirty areas, because a deposit of dust on the lens may reduce performance. It may also obstruct the anti-insect screen and prevent smoke from entering the smoke detector.
- Do not install the detector in areas infested with insects. If small insects enter the smoke detector chamber, they may trigger intermittent alarms.
- Places where the ambient temperature can exceed 40°C or fall below 0°C (that is to say roofs, solid floors, doors, ovens or heaters, etc.) as this can cause the battery to malfunction.
- Near decorations, fans, light fittings, window frames, etc., which can prevent smoke from reaching the detector.
- Surfaces that are generally colder or hotter than the rest of the room (e.g. air conditioning, if present), which may prevent smoke from reaching the detector.
- Make sure you do not install the detector in areas where there is mechanical ventilation, fans, etc. that can cause changes in the direction of airflow.
- In very high or hard to access areas (e.g. staircase roofs) where you may find it difficult to reach the detector (to test it, turn it off or replace the battery).
- Place the device over 1 m away from direct light and heat sources, also in the case of interference.
- Place the device over 1.5 m away from fluorescent light fittings, because "concentric" or "electrical" light and then flickering may affect the functioning of the device.

Installation procedure

1. Choose a location in accordance with the advice given in the paragraph "Location of the smoke alarm" and "Positioning of the smoke alarm".
2. Place the mounting plate on the ceiling at the precise location where you want to install the detector. With a pencil, mark the location of the two screw holes.
3. Making sure you avoid any electrical wiring present in the ceiling, punch a hole with a drill bit in the centre of the locations marked. Insert the plastic dowels into the holes made. Remove the mounting plate to the ceiling (do not remove). Make sure you protect the detector against dust during operation. You may also use the double-sided adhesive specified by Honeywell, and fix the base to the surface.

English

Note: do not use the adhesive unless the surface is smooth and clean.

4. Carefully align the device to the base with the help of a screwdriver (see Figure 1a). Then turn it (again clockwise) (see Figure 1b).
- (Note: to remove the alarm from the ceiling, turn it anti-clockwise (see Figure 1a)).
5. Press the test button to check the alarm is working, as shown in Figure 4.
6. With a 10 year battery, the test button is no longer necessary. The expiration period is automatically triggered upon activation of the DF88MS (see Figure 2).

Securing the alarms

The head of the smoke detector may be secured to prevent any unauthorized removal. Break the little clip located on the base of the detector, as indicated in Figure 5. To remove the detector head, it will have to be necessary to use a small screwdriver to release the ratchet (pushing it upwards), then unscrew the base (see Figure 6). It is possible, when required, to secure the detector head further by using a self-tapping screw (diameter 2 to 3 mm is diameter 5x5 to 8 mm long, not supplied) to fix the head firmly to the mounting plate (see Figure 7). Fix the head of the smoke detector to the mounting plate. Align the screw (not supplied) to the hollow U-shaped hole (illustrated in Figure 7) and screw it tight. To remove the smoke detector head from the ceiling, start by removing the screw. Then, using a small screwdriver, release the ratchet (pushing it upwards), then release the head of the detector by turning it anti-clockwise.

Push the ratchet upwards and turn the alarm anti-clockwise to remove it.
