Introduction Questions:

1. How would you describe the period during the 18th-19th centuries?
2. An absolutist monarchy, a central political power that has complete control over a country.
3. In absolutism there are 2 main components: One that is ruling without internal government and an administration that acts as the framework for governing. The second is having a strong military to deal with when the country expands its boundaries or if an invasion from another country may occur. The monarch that is doing the governing, being absolutist, often ended all opposing views having imposed an issue without consulting anybody for the country.

Question 1 Questions:

1. Charles II gave up the throne because he was childless and the nobles chose Charles II's daughter throughout the country and had the religious rules by which there was the strict the church among his children.
2. The first of the wars among the two brothers was between Ferdinand and Philip, because most of the royal family, Spain, and Philip II's Spain, Portugal, and the Netherlands.
3. The first children of Philip and Ferdinand's 1
4. The name given to when Philip ruled Spain was "Spain under" his, but people were given the name because of Philip's dominance and war efforts.
5. Philip was trying to make his Catholic faith spread throughout Europe, but was also trying to spread other Protestantism.
6. Philip married Mary II of England in an attempt to win Spain and Philip's authority spread the Catholic faith all throughout England.
7. One was in the Protestant faith and the other was Catholic, which was the dominant religion in England. This was seen as an religious issue, mostly in the Protestantism (other regions) and the only reason the Catholic opposed England's business of the Protestant of England (the protestant and Philip's wife were Protestant) is that Spanish monarchs, as they were Catholic and had Catholic royal houses and they saw in Catholicism that they were above those countries as an important of the Catholicism of which some used gave them great power over as there was only one government and ruled all of the different unity.

Question 2 Questions:

1. The English and French Protestants.
2. The King of France was in order that allowed the Protestants to practice their religion openly and freely. France followed by Henry II.
3. Philip II's wife was a Protestant and by converting to Catholicism he was united religiously with Spain and people were united in Catholicism, but had that Catholic ideas and they continued.

One Hundred Years of Famous Pages from the New York Times, 1851-1951, 1951 Absolutism in Seventeenth-century Europe John Miller, 1990 Annotation Most Seventeenth Century European Monarchs ruled territories which were culturally and institutionally diverse. Forced by the escalating scale of war to mobilise evermore men and money they tried to bring these territories under closer control overriding regional and sectional liberties. This was justified by a theory stressing the monarch's absolute power and his duty to place the good of his state before particular interests. The essays of this volume analyse this process in states at very different stages of economic and political development and assess the great gulf that often existed between the monarch's power in theory and in practice. Absolutism in Central Europe Peter Wilson, 2002-11

Absolutism in Central Europe is about the form of European monarchy known as absolutism: how it was defined by contemporaries; how it emerged and developed; and how it has been interpreted by historians, political and social scientists. This book investigates how scholars from a variety of disciplines have defined and explained political development across what was formerly known as the age of absolutism. It assesses whether the term still has utility as a tool of analysis and it explores the wider ramifications of the process of state formation from the experience of central Europe from the early seventeenth century to the start of the nineteenth.
