The field of elementary social studies is a specific space that has historically been granted unequal value in the larger arena of social studies education and research This reader stands out as a collection of approaches aimed specifically at teaching controversial issues in elementary social studies This reader challenges social studies education i e classrooms teacher education programs and research to engage controversial issues those topics that are politically religiously or are otherwise ideologically charged and make people especially teachers uncomfortable in profound ways at the elementary level This reader meant for elementary educators preservice teachers and social studies teacher educators offers an innovative vision from a new generation of social studies teacher educators and researchers fighting against the forces of neoliberalism and the marginalization of our field The reader is organized into three sections 1 pushing the boundaries of how the field talks about elementary social studies 2 elementary social studies teacher education and 3 elementary social studies teaching and learning Individual chapters either A conceptually unpack a specific controversial issue e g Islamophobia Indian Boarding Schools LGBT issues in schools and how that issue should be is incorporated in an elementary social studies methods courses and classrooms or B present research on elementary preservice teachers or how elementary teachers and students engage controversial issues This reader unpacks specific controversial issues for elementary social studies for readers to gain critical content knowledge teaching tips lesson ideas and recommended resources Endorsement Re Imagining Elementary Social Studies is a timely and powerful collection that offers the best of what social studies education could and should be Grounded in a politics of social justice this book should be used in all elementary social studies methods courses and schools in order to develop the kinds of teachers the world needs today Wayne Au Professor University of Washington Bothell Editor Rethinking Schools Resources in Education ,1989 The Social Studies ,1928 Social Amnesia and the Eclipse of History in New Zealand School Syllabi 1947-2002 David Glowsky,2004-01-04 Seminar paper from the year 2002 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies Culture and Applied Geography grade 1 3 A Victoria University of Wellington Robert Stout Research Centre course MNZS 511 Contemporary New Zealand language English abstract This essay analyses the content of the New Zealand Social Studies and History syllabi of the past 55 years It concentrates on the one hand on content that refers to race relations in the country to see what information was included or excluded to draw a certain picture of race relations on the other hand it looks at how New Zealand interprets its links to other countries to find out where it places itself culturally and politically in the world It looks for patterns within the curriculum content that indicate certain ideological directions at the time the curricula were written and for changes in these patterns over time The underlying assumption here is that any school curriculum regardless of its composition is invariably a political instrument Openshaw and Archer have shown that even Social Studies which have been regarded as unbiased and value free are as indoctrinated as history syllabi of the early 20th century The main objective of Social Studies since its introduction in 1947 has not been to teach history With little changes in formulation its aims have been to prepare children for life in New Zealand society to introduce them to democratic institutions and make them eligible citizens History as such plays a minor part in this In 1986 Ann Low Beer a visiting British historian reported that the majority of Social Studies teachers had no training in history and historical material like primary resources hardly existed The framework of Social Studies in the 1980s like today was sociological based on general conceptions of human nature and interaction Low Beer s survey of teachers in 15 Wellington Junior schools asked whether students at the end Form 4 that is at the end of the compulsory Social Studies course had an overall view of New Zealand human history The responses made clear that Social Studies is about the present and a picture of New Zealand sic past is not the point of the course According to the teachers after eight years of Social Studies the pupils had no idea they knew not even the basics like the names of Prime Ministers this century and it was best to assume total ignorance of history in all pupils entering Form V 5 Pupils thought similar about this issue Keen found in 1977 that only 25% of older pupils felt that Social Studies had given them any insight into history
