Showing Students the Forest Ashley Colburn, 2009 Beyond the Modern University Marcus P. Ford, 2002-11-30 The modern university which has its origins in 18th and 19th century Germany is currently at war within itself It seeks to portray itself on the one hand as an engine of economic development and on the other hand as existing for the sake of disinterested scholarly reflection and as a repository for human culture The author outlines an entirely different conception of what the university must become if it is to be a force for good in the world The author contends that the modern university actively participates in the breakdown of human communities and the destruction of the natural world He identifies the university's commitments to academic disciplines philosophical materialism and economism the modern faith that infinite economic growth is both possible and desirable as the roots of its negative impact and calls for changes that would make the university a powerful agent for good in the world Islands in History and Representation Rod Edmond, VANESSA SMITH, 2020-10-28 This innovative collection of essays explores the ways in which islands have been used imagined and theorised both by island dwellers and continentals This study considers how island dwellers conceived of themselves and their relation to proximate mainlands and examines the fascination that islands have long held in the European imagination The collection addresses the significance of islands in the Atlantic economy of the eighteenth century the exploration of the Pacific the important role played by islands in the process of decolonisation and island oriented developments in postcolonial writing Islands were often seen as natural colonies or settings for ideal communities but they were also used as dumping grounds for the unwanted a practice which has continued into the twentieth century The collection argues the need for an island based theory within postcolonial studies and suggests how this might be constructed Covering a historical span from the eighteenth to the twentieth century the contributors include literary and postcolonial critics historians and geographers Perfect Enemy Dean T.
