THE LUNGA CONTROVERSY

Lunga is a privately built, planned city near Pune, located near the Raj Reservoir. It is a project of the Lunghar Construction Company and is often described as the first 5G smart newly developed after independence. The plan for the city, which was to have an area of 280 sq km, was a grid—there were to be hotels, a city centre, a university, a sports facility, and theme parks (read 'Ganesh Lunghar: The Hill City', on the website <http://www.lunghar.com/rajreservoir/index.asp>). Thereby, the city became a prototype of a smart city and its grandiose construction was fully, and has the distinction of being the largest urban infrastructure project in India as it provides significant economic benefits to the region. A unique architectural design that is seamlessly integrated with natural surroundings, enhancing the eco-friendliness of the area and over 70% of the area that is to be developed through natural landscaping, reforestation and green growing.¹

Lunga city has been planned and developed by the internationally renowned design consultant HOK, US, and has received awards such as the World Architectural and the Indian Green Building Award. Lunghar Corporation also had taken up various corporate social responsibility (CSR) projects for the people in the region, especially in the areas of health, education, employment, housing, and environment. In the CSR initiative, along with the construction, some of the major projects were in the field of solid waste management, bio-fertiliser, and nature tourism.²

However, the project has attracted controversy from the day it began, ranging from issues of environmental damage to procurement of land by illegal means and showing bias through corrupt methods.

In 2013, Indian Ministry of Environment requested the company to stop the construction as it crossed the environmental norms. The Ministry of Environment and Forests had issued a notice under section 3(1) of the Environmental Protection Act, 1986, stating that the project was a violation of the Environmental Protection Act, 1986, and the company was asked to stop the construction of the project. The company had to stop the construction of the project.

Although the project had planned to stop money from the market using an online public offer (IPO), the plan has been temporarily deferred following the chairman's advice from the company.

Lunga's residents have been in the limelight in a controversy raised by the company. It denied the allegations made by the Ministry and issued a press release, stating that the project was planned
