learning and research over many decades large ICT software projects have continued to experience poor outcomes or fallen short of original expectations some spectacularly so This is the case in the Australian and New Zealand public sectors even though these projects operate within historically developed institutional frameworks that provide the rules guidelines and controls and aim to consistently improve outcomes Something is amiss In Adapting for Inertia Grant Douglas questions the effectiveness of these institutional frameworks in governing large ICT software projects in the Australian and New Zealand public sectors He also gauges the perspectives of a large number of actors in projects in both sectors and examines two case studies in detail The main narrative to emerge is that the institutional frameworks are in a state of inertia they are failing to adapt owing to various institutional factors all of which have public policy implications Sadly Douglas finds this inertia is likely to continue If there is difficulty in changing the capacity to govern he proposes policymakers should look to change the nature of what is to be governed
