

Ch. 37; Plant Nutrition & Soils

Vocabulary

- Humus-partly decayed organic matter found in topsoil
- Macronutrients-inorganic chemical elements required in large amounts
- Micronutrients-minerals required in minute amounts
- Food Security-having access to sufficient, safe food to avoid malnutrition and starvation
- Nodules-specialized tissue that surrounds and houses beneficial bacteria
- Phytoremediation-process that uses plants to remove contamination from soil or water
- Heavy Metals-metallic elements with high atomic numbers

Soils: The Substrates on Which Plants Depend

Soil is weathered outer layer of Earth's crust

Composed of mixture of ingredients which may include sand, rocks, clay, silt, humus, air, organic matter, microorganisms

Pore spaces containing water and air occur between particles

- Soil is Composed of Mineral, Organic Matter, Water, Air, & Organisms

92 elements found in soil, most are minerals

Microorganisms break down and recycle organic debris

Most roots are found in topsoil

Mixture of mineral particles, living organisms, and humus

Characterized by relative amounts of sand, silt, and clay

Composition determines bio-availability of water and nutrients

- Water & Mineral Availability are Determined by Soil Characteristics

Only minerals dissolved in water in spaces/pores among soil particles are available for roots

Organic soil and minerals tend to have negative charges thus attracting positive ions

Active transport moves positive ions into root

Soil particles with negative charge

Positive ions are attracted to soil

Negative ions stay in solution creating charge gradient

Active transport required to maintain positive ions in roots

Membrane potential and water potential differences affects root transport of minerals

Half of soil volume is pores which may have air or water

Some water not available due to gravitational drainage

Some unavailable due to tight association with soil

Small soil pores have water available for plants

- Cultivation Can Result in Soil Loss & Nutrient Depletion

When topsoil is lost both water-capacity and nutrient relationships of soil are adversely affected

When vegetative cover of soil is disrupted then erosion via water/wind increases

Erosion reduction practices; intercropping, conservation tillage, no-till

Overuse of fertilizers can cause water pollution

- Salinity & pH Affect Water & Mineral Availability

Alteration of water potentials and ionic gradients between soil and roots affect availability of plants to absorb water/nutrients

Acid Soils

The pH of soil affects release of minerals from weathering rock

Most plants grow best at slightly acidic pH

Salinity

Accumulation of salt ions (Na^+ , Cl^-) in soil alters water potential leading to loss of turgor in plants

Common in dry areas where salt is introduced via irrigation
