

A central green, textured sphere is held by numerous hands of various skin tones, all reaching towards it from the edges of the frame. The hands are positioned as if they are collectively supporting or presenting the sphere. The background is a solid black, which makes the hands and the green sphere stand out prominently. The sphere has a fine, pebbled texture and a vibrant green color. The hands are shown from the wrist up, with fingers slightly curled around the sphere. The lighting is soft, highlighting the texture of the sphere and the skin of the hands.

Chemical Reactivity in Liquids Michael Moreau, Pierre Turq, 2012-12-06 Understanding chemical reactivity has been the permanent concern of chemists from time immemorial. If we were able to understand it and express it quantitatively, there would practically remain no unsolved mystery and reactions would be fully predictable with their products and rates and even side reactions. The beautiful developments of thermodynamics through the 19th century supplied us with the knowledge of the way a reaction progresses and the statistical view initiated by Gibbs has progressively led to an understanding closer to the microscopic phenomena. But it was always evident to all that these advances still left our understanding of chemical reactivity far behind our empirical knowledge of the chemical reaction in its practically infinite variety. The advances of recent years in quantum chemistry and statistical mechanics, enhanced by the present availability of powerful and fast computers, are very fast changing this picture and bringing us really close to a microscopic understanding of chemical equilibria, reaction rates, etc. This is the reason why our Society encouraged a few years ago the initiative of Professor Savo Bratos, who with a group of French colleagues prepared an impressive study on Reactivite chimique en phase liquide, a prospective report which was jointly published by the Societe Fran. Principles Involved in Chemical Reactivity John Albert Newton Friend, 1935 Chemistry and Chemical Reactivity Mary L.
