Rattan,2003-09-30 After decades of systematic collection of data describing age related changes in organisms organs tissues cells and macromolecules biogerontologists are now in a position to construct general principles of ageing and explore various possibilities of intervention using rational approaches While not giving serious consideration to the claims made by charlatans it cannot be ignored that several researchers are making genuine attempts to test and develop various means of intervention for the prevention and treatment of age related diseases for regaining the functional abilities and for prolonging the lifespan of experimental organisms This book provides the most up to date information and a critical evaluation of a variety of approaches being tried for modulating aging and longevity including dietary supplementation with antioxidants vitamins and hormones genetic engineering life style alterations and hormesis through mild stress The goal of research on ageing is not to increase human longevity regardless of the consequences but to increase active longevity free from disability and functional dependence

Aging of the Organs and Systems Richard Aspinall, 2013-06-29 During the last 40 years the study of the biological basis of aging has progressed tremendously and it has now become an independent and respectable field of study and research This volume on Aging of Organs and Systems is an attempt to bring understanding to both the aging process and the disease processes of old age Bringing together contributions from an international team of authors it will be of interest to graduates and postgraduates in the fields of medicine and nursing researchers of different aspects of biogerontology and those in the pharmaceutical cosmeceutical nutraceutical and health care industry

Physiology of Aging Richard A. Kenney, 1989 Biochemistry and Cell Biology of Ageing: Part II Clinical Science J. Robin Harris, Viktor I. Korolchuk, 2019-03-19 This volume of the subcellular Biochemistry series will attempt to bridge the gap between the subcellular events that are related to aging as they were described in the first volume of this set of two books and the reality of aging as this is seen in clinical practice All chapters will start from the biochemistry or cell biology where the data is available and work up towards the understanding that we have of aging in the various areas that are related to the subject Key focus points for this volume are nutrition external factors and genetics on aging There will also be chapters that will focus on various organs or tissues in which aging has been well studied like the eyes the muscles the immune system and the bones The aim of the book project and the book project that is published in concert with this volume is to bring the subcellular and clinical areas into closer contact

Physiological Basis of Aging and Geriatrics Paola S. Timiras, 1994-09-16 Aging is an inevitable aspect of living This book covers the aging process from a physiological viewpoint examining all systems of the body and describing changes that occur with normal aging and in disease Its primary focus is on humans but some animal and in vitro research is included to explain mechanisms and theories of aging Integrated aspects of aging e g demography of aging are considered and preventive and interventive measures pharmacology diet exercise for ensuring healthful aging are discussed The Second Edition of Physiological Basis of Aging and Geriatrics considers many new approaches and methods for studying the aging process New and updated information on molecular and cellular mechanisms pathology and aging related diseases is provided to promote a better understanding of basic biological mechanisms Theories epidemiology demographics and comparative and differential aging are also presented

Times, Cells, and Aging Bernard Strihler, 1977-01-28 Time Cells and Aging 2nd Edition presents the mechanics of cell function and the relevant implications of the molecular genetic view to the aging phenomena This book explores the biology of the aging process Comprised of 11 chapters this edition starts with an overview of the causes and mechanisms underlying the gradual deterioration of structure and function characteristics of aging This text then examines the two aspects of the behavior of man including the reasoned conscious behavior and the greater dependence on reaction patterns predicted on the successful responses of the past Other chapters explore the relationship between aging and mortality rate in animals which is a result of an organism's decreasing ability to function optimally in carrying out his vital functions. The final chapter deals with the implementation of a research plan relevant to understanding the primary mechanisms of the aging process. This book is a valuable resource for gerontologists, biologists, and molecular biologists.

Healthy Longevity and Immune System Valquiria Bueno, Graham Pawelec, 2022-11-12

This book presents studies of the main conditions that affect health and well-being of old people. Considering the present scenario of COVID-19, the effects of this viral infection on individuals older than 65 years are also discussed. The content enables professionals of health and government for the present and future actions in this important area. Readers go through the changes occurring in organs and tissues that can interfere with susceptibility to infections, low response to vaccines, cancer, and loss of cognition during the aging process. A discussion of the central role played by the immune system in age-related diseases and how the immunity can be impaired during the ageing process is presented. Possibilities to circumvent these conditions via healthy habits in diet, physical exercise, and new pharmacological interventions are part of the content. This book discusses how human healthy longevity is dependent at least in part of a functional immune system. Chapters were written for researchers in the field of aging and is especially suited for those interested in the study of immunosenescence and inflammaging affecting the health of old individuals.

Aging and Cell Structure John E. Johnson, 2012-03-08

Although thousands of articles and hundreds of books on aging have been published, only a small percentage of this material has dealt with anatomy, particularly at the fine structural level. It was with this in mind that Aging and Cell Structure was conceived. Volume 1 of Aging and Cell Structure was published in 1981 and represented a current compilation of information concentrating at the electron microscopic level on morphological changes which occur in cells and tissues as they age. The present volume completes the two-volume set. While Volume 1 highlighted structural changes occurring in the aging nervous system, Volume 2 centers its efforts on studies of in vitro aging. Chapters on other subjects are included as well. These include age-related changes seen in neuromuscular junctions, oral tissues, and the pancreas. Although these two volumes represent a very small part of the published information on experimental gerontology, their approach is rather unique because they focus on anatomy, perhaps the most basic of all the biomedical sciences. Because many different tissue types are examined, we begin to see recurrent definitive patterns in the aging cell which may not be fully apparent from studies taking one cell type at a time. This becomes even more evident in the present volume where changes seen in populations of cells grown in culture, isolated from hormones or nervous impulses from other body areas, are found to be similar to those changes found in vivo.
