Communication For Development Theory And Practice For Empowerment And Social Justice:

Communication for Development Srinivas Raj Melkote, H. Leslie Steeves, 2015-10-26 Watch Professor Melkote talk about Communication for Development Theory and Practice for Empowerment and Social Justice This book critically examines directed social change theory and practice while presenting a conceptual framework of development communication to address inequality and injustice in contemporary contexts This third edition features significantly revised and updated chapters to include the latest scholarship on and practices of media and communication for development It explores empowerment and social justice to individuals and communities around the world in the context of increasing globalization Tracing the history of development communication it looks objectively at diverse approaches and their supporters and goes on to provide models for the future It also offers a new chapter presenting the authors framework foregrounding empowerment and social justice as goals for development communication in the 21st century The earlier editions of this book Communication for Development in the Third World 1991 and 2001 are established core texts for courses on development communication throughout the world

Media and Development Richard Vokes, 2017-11-15 At the start of the 21st century the relationship between media and development has never felt more important Following a series of media revolutions throughout the developing world beginning with the advent of cheap transistor radio sets in the late 1960s followed by the rapid expansion of satellite television networks in the 1990s and the more recent explosion of mobile telephony social media and the internet a majority of people living in the Global South now have access to a wide variety of Information and Communications Technologies ICTs and live in media saturated environments Yet how can radio television and mobile phones be most effectively harnessed towards the goals of purposive economic social and political change Should they be seen as primarily a provider of channels through which useful information can be delivered to target populations in the hope that such information will alter those populations existing behaviours Or should they be seen as a tool for facilitating two way communication between development providers and their recipients i e as technologies for improving participatory development Or should new media environments be approached simply as sites in which people living in the developing world can define development on their own terms This timely and original book which is based on a critical reading of the relevant literatures and on the author's own extensive primary research introduces readers to all of these questions and helps them to reach their own informed positions on each It also examines the history of and current debates regarding media representations of development Drawing on case studies from all over the world including hate radio in Rwanda theatre for development in India telenovelas in Latin America mobile banking and money in Africa and GIS and humanitarianism in Haiti it will be of interest to all undergraduate and postgraduate students of media and development international development professionals and simply to anyone with an interest in how media does can or should change the world

Translation as Social Justice Wine Tesseur, 2022-09-30 This book analyses the translation policies and practices of international non governmental organisations INGOs engaging in critical questions around the ways in which translation can redress power dynamics between INGOs and the people they work with and the role of activist researchers in contributing to these debates The volume examines the duality of translation and interpreting in INGOs traditionally undervalued and under resourced while simultaneously acknowledged as a powerful tool in ensuring these organisations work according to their own values of equal access to information dialogue and political representation Drawing on over ten years of ethnographic fieldwork and interview data with a wide variety of INGOs Tisseur offers unique insights into if and how INGOs plan for translation and interpreting needs while also critically reflecting on her own experience and the ways in which activist researchers like her can ensure social justice efforts are fully reflected in their own working practices Encouraging a new interdisciplinary research agenda the volume seeks to raise the profile of language and translation in humanitarian and development contexts and cross disciplinary dialogue in scholarship on these issues The book will be of interest to scholars in translation and interpreting studies sociolinguistics development studies and international relations
