Electric Field

1. An electric field surrounds an electric charge. The field strength at any place in the field can be found by placing a small positive test charge there. Where the force on the test charge is great, the field strength is great; where the force is weak, the field strength is weak. Electric field strength is directly proportional to the force exerted on a positive test charge.

The direction of an electric field at any point is the same as the direction of the force exerted on the positive test charge.

Some electric field lines surrounding a positive charge are shown above. They extend radially from the charge. A vector is sketched at point a to represent the force that would be exerted on a positive test charge there (its direction shows that like charges repel). Other points b, c, d, e and f are all located at the same distance from the positive charge.

Draw a vector at each point b - f to show the force on the same test charge.

2. The electric field about a negative charge is shown to the right. The field lines point radially inward, in the same direction a positive test charge would be forced. Assume the magnitude of the negative charge is the same as the charge above.

Draw field vectors at each of the points h - m.

3. The pair of equal and opposite charges of Questions 1 and 2 is shown below. Their individual fields, drawn uninfluenced by each other, overlap to form a field pattern that can be constructed by vector rules. This is shown at locations a and b, where the two forces combine to a single resultant force. Note that point b overlaps point m, and also points c and l overlap. Note how the size of each vector depends on its distance from the charge (inverse-square law). Every point in the field is the result of both the positive and the negative charges.

By vector rules, show the resultant of all the vector pairs shown. Then sketch in sample vector resultants at a few other places. Does the pattern that emerges agree with the field patterns shown in Figure 3 on the next page?

Human Adjustment Janet A. Simons, Seth Kalichman, 1994 Theoretical Nursing Afaf Ibrahim Meleis, 2011 An additional assumption was that the processes for theory development were new to nursing and hence nurses in graduate programs learned strategies for advancing knowledge from other disciplines This assumption was debunked with the knowledge that nurses were always engaged in knowledge development driven by their experiences in clinical practice Because of these assumptions most of the early writing about theory development was about outlining strategies that should be used rather than strategies that have already been used in the discipline to develop theories Theorists themselves did not uncover or adequately discuss ways by which they developed their theories therefore the tendency was to describe processes that were based on theories developed in other disciplines mainly the physical and social sciences And an implicit assumption was made that there should be a single strategy for theory development some claiming to begin the process from practice and others believing it should be driven by research Provided by publisher
