ANALYSIS AND INTERPRETATION OF DATA:

DELIVERING e-SERVICES USERS' PERCEPTIONS

The e-Disha projects have been established in Haryana state to deliver various kinds of regulatory services to the citizens in an efficient, effective and economic manner. The project e-Disha was initiated in March 2006 in Haryana state. These e-Disha centres have been established in official/complex in mini secretariats at the district level and in the concerned state sub-division or town levels. It is an IT-driven electronic interface between the government and citizens (G2C) offering a variety of citizen-friendly services in an efficient and coordinated manner. The services provided at e-Disha centres are related to regulatory administration, primary departments of the government and line departments as stated earlier at the district or sub-district level. Thus, there is a quest to provide services at the doorsteps of citizens under the e-Disha project.

The state government has provided an adequate space and other infrastructural to these e-Disha centres in order to smooth and comfortable dispensation of services to the people of concern districts. The e-Disha centre is an innovation and IT based mechanism for extending citizen-centric services, therefore, the present study is conducted to make an assessment of the projects performance level of e-Disha centres from the users' point of view in the sample districts. Further, the performance assessment of the sampled e-Disha centre is measured in terms of various objectives such as: providing services to citizen in an efficient, reliable and integrated manner; avoiding duplication of efforts by individual departments; reducing the cost of delivery of services; making government transparent ensuring interaction
