Chemistry and Biochemistry of Plant Pigments Trevor Walworth Goodwin, 1976 Chemistry and Biochemistry of Plant Pigments Goodwin T. W., 1976 Chemistry and Biochemistry of Plant Pigments, 1976 Plant Pigments, Flavors and Textures N.A.M. Eskin, 2012-12-02 Plant Pigments Flavors and Textures The Chemistry and Biochemistry of Selected Compounds focuses on the chemistry and biochemistry of compounds responsible for the pigments flavors and textures of some fruits and vegetables Since much of the information presented is scattered in the scientific literature an attempt has been made to integrate the material into a concise yet comprehensive text The book is organized into three sections that deal separately with pigments flavors and textures Section I discusses pigment degradation during processing and storage as well as attempts to prevent color deterioration Section II examines the biogenesis of several groups of compounds that contribute to flavor Section III deals with the chemistry and biochemistry of plant cell wall components and their relation to texture This book will be useful to food scientists as well as those interested in foods The extensive references cited in the text will enable the reader to pursue any of the topics discussed in more depth Chemistry and Biochemistry of Plant Pigments Goodwin T. W., 1976 Plant Pigments Trevor Walworth Goodwin, 1988 The biochemistry of plant pigments attracts continuing interest and research from a wide range of pure and applied biochemists and plant scientists In many areas the first two editions of Professor Goodwin's Chemistry and Biochemistry of Plant Pigments have been overtaken by research and the need for a new up to date summary has become pressing This new book was conceived in response to this need The burgeoning literature mitigates against a comprehensive treatment Instead Professor Goodwin has identified seven topics which represent growing points in plant pigment research and has invited experts to prepare critical reviews of recent developments in them The resulting book is an essential companion to the earlier volumes and will ensure that workers in this field are absolutely up to date with the latest thinking The Biochemistry of Natural Pigments G. Britton, George Britton, 1983-03-10 This book describes the structures and properties of the main groups of natural pigments Plant Pigments, Flavors and Texture Neason A. M. Reviews Volume 14 It is difficult to over state the importance of plant pigments in biology Chlorophylls are arguably the most important organic compounds on earth as they are required for photosynthesis Carotenoids are also necessary for the survival of both plants and mammals through their roles in photosynthesis and nutrition respectively The other plant pigment groups such as flavonoids and betalains have important roles in both the biology of plants and the organisms with which plants interact This book provides an overview of pigment chemistry and biology together with an up to date account of the biosynthesis of pigments and the modification of their production using biotechnology The chapters cover a wide scope of pigmentation research from the importance of structural diversity in generating the range of colours seen in plants through to improving human health properties of crops by increasing pigment levels in transgenic plants The volume is directed at researchers and professionals in plant biochemistry molecular biology and genetics

Chemical Changes in Food during Processing Thomas Richardson, John W. Finley, 1986-03-31 This volume results from the Eighth Basic Symposium held by the Institute of Food Technologists in Anaheim California on June 8 9 1984 The theme of the symposium was Chemical Changes in Food during Processing The speakers included a mix of individuals from academic institutions governmental agencies and the food industry Twenty speakers discussed topics ranging from the basic chemistry relating to food constituents to the more applied aspects of chemical changes in food components during food processing It was the intent of the organizers to bring together a group of speakers who could address the chemistry of changes in food components during processing from a mechanistic point of view As a consequence the proceedings of this symposium emphasize the basic chemistry of changes in food constituents from a generic perspective which is intended to provide the reader with a background to address more specific problems that may arise
