

Chapter 6

- Notes Receivable – Claims supported by formal promises to pay usually in the form of notes.
  - The note may be payable on demand or at a definite future date.
  - Standing alone, the term notes receivable represents only claims arising from sale merchandise or service in the ordinary course of business.
    - Thus, notes received from officers, employees, shareholders, and affiliates shall be designated separately.
- A negotiable promissory note
  - an unconditional promise in writing made by one person to another, signed by the maker, engaging to pay a demand or at a fixed future date to a sum certain in money to order or to bearer.
  - A written contract in which one person, known as the maker, promises to pay another person, known as the payee.
- Dishonored notes
  - When a promissory notes matures and is not paid, it is said to be dishonored.
  - Theoretically, dishonored notes receivable should be removed from the notes receivable account and transferred to accounts receivable.
  - The amount debited to accounts receivable should include the face amount, interest and other charges.
  - Such approach is defended on the grounds that the overdue note has lost part of its status as a negotiable instrument and really represents only ordinary claims against the maker.
- Initial measurement of notes receivable
  - Conceptually, notes receivable shall be measure initially at present value.
  - The present value is the sum of all future cash flows discounted using the prevailing market rate of interest for similar notes.

- The prevailing market value rate of interest is actually the effective interest rate.
- However, short-term notes receivable shall be measured at face amount. Cash flow relating to short-term notes receivable are not discounted because the effect of discounting is usually not material.

➤ Interest-bearing notes receivable

- The initial measurement of long-term notes will depend on whether the notes are interest bearing or noninterest bearing.
- Interest bearing long-term notes are measured at face amount which is actually the present value upon issuance.

Illustration 1

An entity owned the tract of land costing P800,000 and sold the land for P1,000,000.

The entity received a 3-year note for P1,000,000 plus interest of 12% compound annually. The selling price of P1,000,000 is reasonably assumed to the present value of the note.

First year

Note receivable	1,000,000
Land		800,000
Gain on sale of land		200,000

Accrued interest receivable	120,000
