Photoelectron Spectroscopy

(What Is Photoelectron Spectroscopy?)

From our previous examination of the ionization energies of the atoms, we proposed a shell model of the atom, and noted that the number of valence electrons in the outermost shell is related to the position of the element in the periodic table, and therefore is an important factor in determining the physical and chemical properties of the element. Within this model, the electrons in an atom are arranged in shells about the nucleus, with the successive shells being farther and farther from the nucleus. The ionization energy described previously is the minimum energy needed to remove an electron from the atom. The most easily removed electron always resides in the valence shell, since that is the shell that is the farthest from the nucleus. For atoms with many electrons, we would expect that the energy needed to remove an electron from an inner shell would be greater than that needed to remove an electron from the valence shell, because an inner shell is closer to the nucleus and is not as fully shielded as the outer valence electrons. Thus, less energy is needed to remove an electron from an  $n = 2$  shell than from an  $n = 1$  shell, and even less is needed to remove an electron from an  $n = 3$  shell. But do all electrons in a given shell require precisely the same energy to be removed? In order to answer this question, we must consider ionization energies in greater detail.

Model 1: Ionization Energies and Energy Levels

From the Coulombic Potential Energy expression, we know that an electron in a given shell will require a certain energy to be separated from the atom. Thus, an electron can be said to occupy an energy level in an atom. Within our model, each electron must be in a shell at a particular distance from the nucleus, and the energy levels corresponding to these shells are quantized—that is, only certain discrete energy levels should be found.
